16 Maryland Votes Gained By Roosevelt; Margin 5½-1

Breckinridge Polls Only 15,151 to Presidents 82,630 in Primary.

Fight Is Hottest In Baltimore City

Rep. Lewis Leads in 6th District; G.O.P. Result There in Doubt.

By Franklyn Waltman.

President Roosevelt yesterday won Maryland's 16 votes in the Democratic National Convention, easily defeating Col. Henry Breckinridge by approximately 5½ to 1 on the basis of returns from [illegible] polling places out of 1,426, as tabulated by the Associated Press.

The vote was:

Roosevelt	82,630
Breckinridge	15,151
Uninstructed delegation	1,288

Earlier in the tabulation President Roosevelt had a lead of better than 6 to 1 over Col. Breckinridge, New York lawyer, former Assistant Secretary of War in the Wilson Administration and counsel for Charles A. Lindbergh. But as returns from the Maryland counties commenced to pile up the President's proportionate lead was slightly reduced.

Representative David J. Lewis, on the basis of incomplete returns, appeared assured of renomination by the Democrats in the Sixth Maryland District. S. Clay Plummer, former Montgomery County sheriff, was trailing Lewis in most of the polling places where returns had been completed.

G. O. P. Result in Doubt.

The six-man fight for the Republican Congressional nomination from the Sixth district at a late hour remained in doubt, with A. Charles Stewart projected into a good lead by strong support in Allegany County.

Representative Stephen W. Gambrill had no difficulty in overcoming John W. Klemm, his perennial opponent for the Democratic Congressional nomination in the Southern Maryland district.

The hottest fight in Maryland, over the Democratic nomination for Congress from the Third (Baltimore City) District, resulted in victory for Representative Vincent L. Palmisano over John M. Polhaus, by a slight margin.

In Maryland's Second Congressional District—comprising a part of Baltimore City, Harford, Baltimore and Carroll counties—Representative William P. Cole seemed certain of renomination, by the Democrats despite three opponents. When 312 of the 411 polling places in the district had reported Cole had 12,098 votes to 8,531 for Richard C. O'Connell, his closest rival.

Voting throughout the State was marked by apathy, the contests attracting only between 15 and 40 per cent of the registered Democrats to the polls. Proportionately even fewer Republicans took the trouble of registering their primary choices. There was no contest over the Presidential nomination among the Republicans.

Creditable Race.

Col. Breckinridge, although overwhelmingly beaten, made a creditable race. The entire Democratic organization in Maryland supported President Roosevelt, while Breckinridge had as workers in his behalf only those Maryland Democrats who feel strongly against the President.

Some Democratic leaders believed that if Breckinridge polled more than 10 per cent of the Democratic vote cast it would be an indication that the President will have a difficult time carrying Maryland in November. Actually, Breckinridge with better than two-thirds of the votes counted, had received about 16 per cent. In his race in Pennsylvania last week he received only one vote for each 19 cast for the President.

Due to the lightness of the vote cast in Maryland yesterday it is difficult to compute the effect on President Roosevelt's chances in November. But if one out of every

Colladay Plans To Carry Fight To Convention

Warns Foes in the Party Here to Rectify Its 'Illegal' Actions.

By Edward F. Folliard.

Edward F. Colladay, prominent lawyer and for 19 years Republican National Committeeman for the District of Columbia, last night accused his foes of using "Tammany-like tactics" in trying to strip him of leadership.

He warned that unless the local Republican State committee, at meetings to be held tonight and Thursday night, corrects it "illegal" actions of last week, he will carry his fight to the Republican National Convention in Cleveland next month.

The internecine battle now raging in the local Republican organization, first revealed in The Post, broke out in advance of the recent primary here, when 43 precincts in the city each selected a delegate to the local State committee.

In the campaign preceding the election, Colladay's opponents accused him of trying to "dominate" the local organization and of planning to take a hand-picked delegation to Cleveland to vote for Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas for the Presidential nomination. In making this charge, they insisted that they were not opposing Landon, who, from all indications, will get the District's three delegate votes.

The wing of the organization opposed to Colladay also charged that stenographers in his office were seeking election as delegates to the local convention. This charge Colladay answered last night.

The 43 delegates elected in the primary met Thursday night and elected 43 delegates at large. There were two slates of candidates for delegates at large, one favored by Colladay an dthe other drawn up by

Bone Charges 'OGPU' of U.S., Seeks Inquiry

New Deal Senator Cites Bureau's Investigation of Campaign Fund.

By Robert C. Albright.

A Senate investigation of the Government's far-flung "undercover" system was suggested yesterday by Senator Homer T. Bone (Democrat), of Washington, who called it a "nascent and budding OGPU" which might easily become the instrument for political blackmail.

Bone, liberal and ardent New Dealer, electrified the Senate with his demands, in an unheralded speech.

"I think that an official investigation would be a healthful thing, and it would give an opportunity to the super-sleuths to come before a committee, where the bright light of publicity could and would be turned on their work," Bone told his colleagues.

Later he advised reporters that he knew of one "utterly indefensible case" of Federal investigators undertaking to look into the campaign expenditures of a member of the Senate. Activities of this sort, he said, are subject for discussion wherever members meet privately for frank discourse.

"What is to prevent such practices from being used to coerce members of Congress into attitudes favorable to the ends sought by the people who control these undercover operators?" Bone asked the Senate.

"If the activities of these men are not brought to light, what is to prevent them from becoming the instruments of tyranny in the hands of ambitious men."

Bone mentioned no Federal investigation unit by name, referring only to practices of "so-called undercover men employed by some Government departments."

150 Planes to Protect Advance of Askaris Into the Capital.

Invaders Resent Aid to Selassie; Foreign Envoys Ask Help.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, May 4.—A reliable source reported tonight an advance guard of Askari (native) Italian troops under the command of Gen. Pirzio Biroli entered the suburbs of Addis Ababa late this afternoon.

The same source that said the main body of Field Marshal Pietro Badoglio's northern army arrived at the ridges about 16 miles from the Ethiopian capital and joined the 15,000 native soldiers.

Occupation of the capital was expected to take place tomorrow.

The plan of occupation, this reliable source said, will be to send the selected troops of Marshal Badoglio to the city under the protection of 150 airplanes.

The news that the Askari Vanguard had already reached the outskirts of Addis Ababa was not expected to be published here until tomorrow.

This follows the government plan to hold back publication of the occupation of Ethiopian territory until the Italian positions have been consolidated, and the danger of counter attacks passed.

Hope to Aid Foreigners.

In military circles it was felt, however, the Askari had pushed ahead with the hope of alleviating the distressing conditions among foreigners in the riot-stricken city.

It was understood that airplanes from bases behind the Italian line had flown over the city again today and had reported the Askari troops well placed on the outskirts of the capital so they could take over the city at a given command.

It also was learned that the Italian government is studying the personal status of Emperor Haile Selassie, but has reached no decision. It was known that there was some resentment against Britain and France for affording the fleeing ruler asylum. The Emperor is traveling to Palestine aboard a British cruiser.

Southern Ethiopia Commanders Flee

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Djibouti, French Somaliland, May 4.—The last vestige of Ethiopian resistance against Italy collapsed tonight when ranking southern front commanders arrived from Harar and Jijiga before Emperor Haile Selassie and the imperial family sailed for Haifa, en route to refuge in Jerusalem, aboard the British cruiser Enterprise.

Less than two hours before the Enterprise steamed out into the scorching Gulf of Tajurrah the Dedjazmacth Nasibu, Governor of Harar and commander in chief of the southern front, arrived with his staff.

Nasibu, who for seven long months kept Gen. Rodolpho Graziani's "hell on wheels" columns stalled in the parched stretches of the Ogaden Desert, abandoned his forces defending Harar and Jijiga.

Pasha Given Credit.

He arrived on the 5:45 p. m. train from Diredawa with the Turkish general Wahib Pasha, his military adviser. The pasha, World War hero of the Dardanelles campaign, was credited with planning and directing the resistance which held Graziani at bay.

Nasibu and the pasha were accompanied by the Dedjazmatch Makkonen Abeba Demtu. Immediately upon their arrival they proceeded direct to the Enterprise,

7 Saved, Ship Burns In Chesapeake Bay

By the United Press.

Baltimore May 4.—Seven men saved their lives tonight by taking to a lifeboat when the James A. Louis, a 300-ton freighter, caught fire in Chesapeake Bay off Reedsville, Va.

The men, comprising the total crew of the Potomac River Transportation Line vessel, were picked up a mile from the blazing ship by the Coast Guard cutter Seminole. They were taken on to Reedsville.

Capt. J. W. Willis, of the Seminole said he did not obtain names of the rescued men immediately.

The James A. Louis was reported burned nearly to the water's edge and drifting toward Rappahannock Spit, approximately half way between Baltimore and Norfolk.

The vessel left Baltimore this morning with a light cargo, headed for Norfolk. She was first reported afire by the lighthouse tender Mayflower early tonight. The Mayflower informed Coast Guard headquarters at Washington, which dispatched the cutter Apache to the scene. Meanwhile the Seminole had observed the blaze and sped to the burning vessel.

Franco-British Aid to Selassie Enrages Rome

Copyright, 1936, by United Press.

Rome, May 4.—The East African war tonight brought Italy nearer the threat of hostilities in Europe than at any time since the invasion of Ethiopia began last October and the British Home Fleet steamed grimly into the Mediterranean.

Officials here have not sought to hide their resentment over French and British attitudes since Emperor Haile Selassie abandoned his capital at Addis Ababa on Saturday.

Three events particularly have aroused Italian ire. They are:

1. French action in receiving the Negus in French Somaliland and quartering him and his family in the governor's palace as guests of France.

2. British action in granting the imperial refugees asylum in Palestine and providing the cruiser Enterprise to take them to Haifa from Djibouti.

3. Continued French and British action in recognizing the fugitive Emperor as a sovereign.

Authoritative political quarters said the Emperor's flight across neutral soil and his transportation in a foreign warship "constitutes a most complicated and delicate case. It is being studied closely."

Officially, the government is silent on the events of the last 48 hours. It is believed to be reserving judgment on the three major developments causing umbrage here.

But unofficially there is no hesitation in indicating that Great Britain's treatment of Haile Selassi and continued Franco-British recognition of him as a sovereign has considerably dampened Italian enthusiasm over the break-up of the Ethiopian Empire and the imminent occupation of Addis Ababa by Marshal Pietro Badoglio's troops.

Selassie Steaming Toward Palestine; Eden Defends English Protection.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 4.—The British government acted to aid the beleaguered American Legation in Addis Ababa today and to speed the fugitive Emperor Haile Selassie to a haven in Palestine.

A plea for help from the British Legation a few miles away by Cornelius Van H. Engert, American minister-resident in Ethiopia, was transmitted halfway around the world. It went to Washington and then to London.

The government here asked its minister, Sir Sidney Barton, to do all he could to meet the request for a few Sikh soldiers and a machine gun to enable the Americans to hold out against bandit attackers.

Emperor Haile Selassie—now an Emperor in name only—and his family and official party steamed from Djibouti, French Somaliland, toward Haifa, Palestine, aboard the British cruiser Enterprise en route to Jerusalem.

As "Conquering Lion of Judah," the Emperor, a Christian, visited Palestine in 1924 on a pilgrimage. The Empress Mennen was there in 1933, where she saw the consecration of Trinity Church and an Ethiopian convent on the banks of the Jordan.

It was Haile Selassie's own wish to go to Palestine.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, announcing to the House of Commons the government's action to meet the Negus' desire, said the British felt it incumbent upon them to grant this request insofar as it lay in their power."

Eden added: The Emperor naturally will be expected, while in Palestine, not to participate in any way in the furtherance of hostilities."

The foreign secretary said he had no more information when asked "whether the Emperor has abdicated or not and who now represents the Ethiopian government and country."

French Stock Market Unsteady, Blum Bids to Form New Cabinet

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 4.—Wide price fluctuations in a nervous stock market reflected the financia l community's uncertainty today over the prospect of a Socialist-dominated leftist government for France.

Leon Blum, leader of the Socialist party, announced he was ready to take over the government and suggested he would like Communist support. The leftist popular front won a sweeping victory in yesterday's run-off chamber elections.

The foreign exchange market showed pronounced activity, with heavy buying of United States dollars, British pounds and Belgian belgas reported.

The United States dollar quotation held at 15.19 francs (6.59 cents to the franc), indicating there would be further shipments of gold to New York, according to financial experts.

Financial writers reported that nearly a billion francs in gold left the country during the last week. There were rumors in financial circles that the Bank of France was considering further lifting its discount rate in an effort to halt the flow of metal abroad.

French securities dropped sharply on the market today, particularly banks and utilities, but recovered somewhat in the wake of government securities, which traders sought in preference to stocks.

Socialist leaders said nationalization of the Bank of France was part of their program, but bankers considered this step extremely unlikely in view of opposition in other wings of the Leftist "People's Front."

Blum, a veteran Socialist leader,

Engert Believes That Evacuation Is Not Necessary

'We Are in No Immediate Danger,' Says Minister in Message to Secretary; Declares Firing Has Lessened.

BRITISH DECLINE GUARD, OFFER TO CONVOY STAFF TO SAFETY

Two Servants Are Wounded Earlier in Day as Ethiopians Attack Legation; Rioters Held Off in Brisk Battle.

By Felix Bruner.

A little band of Americans, one of them a woman, armed with shotguns and pistols with which they were fighting off a horde of half-savage Ethiopians, still were in possession of the United States Legation at Addis Ababa last night in spite of the urgent suggestion of Secretary Hull that they take refuge in the heavily-armed British Legation.

Cornelius Van H. Engert, the American Minister, wirelessed the State Department at 8 p. m. (3 a. m. Addis Ababa time) that he felt he and his staff should not evacuate.

Reports from Rome that the Italians were entering the suburbs of the Ethiopian capital raised the hopes of State Department officials that Engert and his staff might be rescued without the necessity of abandoning the legation.

Hull sent a message to Engert informing him that the seriousness of the situation prevented compliance by the British with a request for a guard for the American Legation, but that the British were sending troops to convoy the Americans to safety.

Night Exceptionally Calm.

Engert replied:

"The night has so far been exceptionally calm and we all feel we should not evacuate. The British Legation has so far not got in touch with me but if after consultation with the officer who would presumably accompany the convoy I consider that there is no other alternative, I shall not hesitate to act in accordance with your suggestion."

At 11 p. m. (6 a. m. Addis Ababa time) Engert again notified the State Department that he was still holding out:

"Nothing has happened since 3 a. m. to alter the views expressed then," he said. "There is still firing, but much less than at this time yesterday. We are in no immediate danger."

He did not say whether the British convoy had arrived at the legation, nor did he confirm reports that the Italians had entered suburbs of the city.

Earlier last night Engert had sent a message saying:

"Feel confident we can hold out until tomorrow."

Two of the legation servants have been wounded and Mrs. Engert, the only white woman within the legation compound, narrowly escaped death as bullets rained upon the building, answered by shotgun and pistol fire from within.

A State Department announcement said:

"The Department has now been informed by the American Ambassador in London that owing to the critical situation obtaining in Addis Ababa the British Minister there is unable to spare a detachment of Sikhs to assist in the defense of the American Legation.

Convoy Offered by British.

"However, the British foreign office has offered to telegraph the British Minister at Addis Ababa to send a convoy to evacuate the occupants of the legation. In view of yesterday's attack on the Turkish Legation, as well as today's attacks against the French, Belgian and American legations, and owing to the fact that the American Legation is not prepared for adequate defense, the British offer has been accepted and the American Minister has been urged to take advantage of the opportunity afforded to evacuate the occupants of the American Legation.

"In expressing admiration for the courage and resourcefulness shown by the Minister and his comrades in defending the Legation, the Secretary of State has stressed the fact that the safety of the occupants is now the paramount factor, and that none of them should hesitate to leave."

Although the British and American legations are less than four miles apart, Engert's call for help had to be relayed 14,000 miles to reach the British. It was sent by wireless to Washington, relayed by transatlantic telephone to London, and then sent to the British Legation at Addis Ababa by wireless.

The dramatic story of the siege of the legation crackled into the Navy radio station here as Engert, busy directing the defense, took time to tell Secretary Hull what was happening from hour to hour. His 11 p. m. message concluded:

"My staff behaving splendidly despite great strain."

The first message, describing the second day of the siege, was sent at 10 a. m. Addis Ababa time (3 a. m. Washington time).

"First definite attempt to gain access to the legation was made by a band of marauders this morning," it said.

Sudden Attack Is Made.

"Between 8:45 and 9 a. m. they suddenly attacked our two widely-separated back gates with heavy rifle fire from behind trees and fences, peppering with bullets the backyard where Mrs. Engert and Spencer (John Spencer, an American and former adviser of Emperor Selassie) happened to be standing at the moment.

"Unfortunately, as the early morning had been comparatively quiet, (Vice Consul William M.) Cramp was at the hospital some two miles from here to see if he could be of assistance and also to have an infected hand of Radioman J. W.

Schisms Mark Election Today In California

Sinclair, Townsend Split Democrats Three Ways; Republicans Divided.

By the Associated Press.

Appeals for a large turnout of voters mingled last night with overwhelming victory predictions as campaigns wound up for today's Presidential primary in which three Democratic and two Republican convention slates face voters.

Intra-party clashes involving State leadership and economic policy, and differences of opinion involving President Roosevelt and Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas, were expected by election officials to bring out a large percentage of the 2,964,336 qualified voters.

Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan estimated the vote might reach 70 per cent of registrations, or 2,075,035.

Three Factions Listed.

The Democratic registration is 1,687,288, or 56.9 per cent of the total. The Republicans have 1,163,780, with minor parties accounting for the rest.

Advocates of production for use as an unemployment palliative, and of old-age pensions, account for two of the Democratic slates, with leaders optimistic of victory.

The campaign manager of the Landon slate, Ross Marshall, of Los Angeles, said reports indicated a three-to-one victory for his group over the uninstructed delegation.

The competing Democratic groups are:

1. The "regular" group picked by President Roosevelt and headed by Senator William G. McAdoo.

2. Upton Sinclair's slate, formed by EPIC Democrats who bolted from the President's group, asserting it is not sufficiently liberal, and charging it is controlled by McAdoo. The Sinclair group seeks a production-for-use platform plank. Although pledged nominally to Sinclair, who fostered the unemployment theory during the bitter 1934 gubernatorial campaign, the slate has proclaimed intention to vote for President Roosevelt "on the second ballot."

3. Representative John S. McGroarty's group whcih seeks a Townsend pension plank, but which, like the EPIC, promised support to President Roosevelt after the initial ballot. The move of Representative McGroarty, a Californian who is author of the Townsend bill now before Congress, was repudiated by Dr. F. E. Townsend, creator of the $200,-a-month pension plan.

Picked for "Harmony."

Senator McAdoo, in a recent Washington speech urging Democrats to back the Roosevelt slate, said failure to do so would be a "slap in the President's face."

The two-way Republican fight brings together an uninstructed delegation headed by State Central Committee Chairman Earl Warren, and the slate pledged to Gov. Landon. The uninstructed group was selected in an effort to promote party "harmony."

Former President Hoover, who has taken no public part in the campaign, has indicated at various times he favors uninstructed delegations.

The Landon ticket is backed by Gov. Frank Merriam and William Randolph Hearst, the publisher. Gov. Landon has not offically recognized or repudiated the slate.

Warren, who urged a large turnout of Republican voters regardless of their leanings, said recently his group does not consider Hoover a candidate for the nomination, a statement which drew no comment from the former President.

Senator's Charge of Governmental OGPU Logical Sequel to Black Committee Methods.

By Franklyn Waltman

SENATOR HOMER T. BONE'S complaint in the Senate that a "'nascent and budding OGPU" exists in the executive departments of government and that it might be used to coerce members of Congress, will strike a sympathetic cord in the breasts of those who recently have been subjected to the Black committee OGPU.

WALTMAN

Were not the development of Government-sponsored espionage so serious, Senator Bone's compaint would be humorous. Here is a member of the Senate who saw nothing whatever wrong in the Black committee issuing dragnet subpenas for the telegrams of businessmen, newspaper publishers and various organizations. Yet he becomes red in the face with indignation over a real or fancied inquiry into the affairs of a member of the Senate by the secret agents of another OGPU.

Of course, the truth ever has been that one set of spies breeds other spies until super-spies spy on the spies and then a higher form of secret agents keeps the super-spies under surveillance. Thus it has happened in Italy, and Germany, and Russia, until the people in these countries go around fearing to venture opinions above a whisper. It is the reason why lovers of liberty strike out at governmental espionage whenever it shows its head—irrespective of its purpose.

And while referring to the Black Lobby Investigating Committee it may be pertinent to inquire whether that group, which professes to be nonpartisan in its attitude, proposes to investigate the formation and financing of the newly organized Good Neighbor League.

This organization, although avowing its nonpartisan objectives, is about as nonpartisan as the American Liberty League—some think it was set up as an antidote for the Liberty League. It was formed under auspices of an employe of the Democratic National Committee and obviously is seeking to promote the prospects of President Roosevelt.

Since the Black Committee has undertaken to investigate a number of organizations which are not engaged in lobbying, but in seeking to bring about the defeat of President Roosevelt, it should likewise look into the background of the Good Neighbor League.

The friends of Col. Frank Knox are not pleased with the indifference of the majority of political commentators toward his Presidential prospects. Few political observers think the Chicago publisher has a chance for the Republican Presidential nomination chiefly because he is neither the leader of the field of candidates nor is he a dark horse. He has acquired just sufficient strength to demonstrate his weakness.

So the Knox managers have put former Senator George H. ("Hawkshaw") Moses on the firing line for their candidate. Twice within a week Senator Moses has issued statements testifying to Col. Knox's alleged great strength. In his latest statement the former Senator asserted that "I know Col. Knox has 169 delegates who have been elected to the Cleveland convention for no purpose other than to vote for the Illinois candidate."

But Mr. Moses declines to specify where these 169 delegates come from, except to assert that they are within the uninstructed delegates which have so far been elected. Undoubtedly here and there an uninstructed delegate will cast his vote for Col. Knox. But there is no evidence to sustain the Moses contention in full.

Former Senator Moses' statements should be read in the light of the fact that he is from New Hampshire, where Col. Knox is part-owner of an influential newspaper and also in light of the fact that Mr. Moses has been employed as a writer on foreign affairs by The Chicago Daily News, of which Col. Knox is publisher. His opinions hardly are those of an objective, unprejudiced observer.

Chairman Henry P. Fletcher of the Republican National Committee and his associates by now probably rue the day that they thought it would be nice to have a "brain trust." Ever since its appointment, that academic group has been a headache to the Republican leaders.

First it was discovered that several of the professors previously had gone on record favoring schemes with a socialistic flavor. Then several were found to have condemned publicly the Hawley-Smoot tariff act—and at least one went to work for the Republicans only after vainly seeking a job with the New Dealers.

The latest headache is the disclosure of a series of talks given in 1934 before a Los Angeles group of businessmen by Prof. Thomas Nixon Carver, dean of the Republican "brain trust," in which he outlined a program for dealing with unemployment as a long-range problem.

Professor Carver proposed exclusion of immigrant labor—which is orthodox enough—but he went on to cite as possible steps birth control among the poor, sterlization of congenital defectives and restriction of marriage to those who can afford to own automobiles. And in pointing out these methods of "population planning," he paid tribute to Hitler and Mussolini for their achievements in this regard. All of which might be sound enough thinking, but it is political dynamite.

If the Republicans espouse the Carver program—which is unlikely—they might adopt as a campaign slogan this year the cry: "A bride in every automobile."

Railroads File Lower Fares, But Plan Fight

Eastern Lines Will Protest Commission's Ruling Reducing Rates.

By the Associated Press.

Railroad passengers throughout the country were assured yesterday of new low fares—for a time, at least.

A group of major Eastern railroads which have objected vigorously to an Interstate Commerce Commission order slashing fares, filed new rates in conformity with the order, but served notice they would challenge it in the courts.

The Baltimore & Ohio previously conformed with the commission ruling and will not attack it in court.

Effective June 2, the I. C. C. prescribed fares of 3 cents a mile in Pullmans and 2 cents a mile in coaches. The present fares are 3.6 for both classes of transportation plus a Pullman surcharge of approximately four-tenths of a cent. In fixing the new fares, the I. C. C. ordered the surcharge eliminated.

Fares Already Low.

Most Western and Southern railroads already charge fares as low or lower than those prescribed by the commission.

Signed by counsel for the carriers, a letter accompanying the rate schedules yesterday said they were being filed "in order to escape the penalties in the Interstate Commerce act for failure to comply" with an I. C. C. ruling.

Asserting the low rates "are being filed under duress of the commission's order," the letter added that the railroads "no not thereby admit, but on the contrary deny, the validity of said order, and it is their intention to institute legal proceedings to test the validity thereof."

No provision was made in the schedules for reduced rates for round trips, and I. C. C. officials assumed that the flat 3 and 2 cent rates would apply both ways on round trip travel.

Tourist Rates Unchanged.

It also was understood that the railroads would make no change in their present summer tourist rates, which apply from May 15 to October 1, and in some cases are lower than the rates fixed by the commission.

The carriers, however, could file amended tariffs to provide for round trips or to make some change in their tourist rates.

Visible Grain Supply.

New York, May 4 (AP).—The visible supply of American grain shows the following changes in bushels: Wheat decreased 1,598,000; corn increased 481,000; oats decreased 793,000; rye decreased 220,000; barley decreased 209,000.

U. S. Business Assails Tax Bill, Is Unanswered

Propaganda by Packers Is Claimed by Harrison; Alvord Is Heard.

Speaking through the United States Chamber of Commerce, organized business yesterday threw the full weight of its opposition against the Administration's tax bill, but its comprehensive attack apparently fell for the most part upon unresponsive ears in the Senate Finance Committee.

Demands that the proposed undistributed earnings tax be scrapped in favor of "a sound fiscal program for both expenditures and revenues," met with little committee comment, and predominant committee sentiment against any drastic changes in the plan appeared unchanged.

Only one Senator was present when Fred H. Clausen, Horicon, Wis., manufacturer, opened the assault for the chamber, and although a quorum was present when Ellsworth C. Alvord, former Treasury expert, wound up the chamber's case, questioning was desultory and spiritless.

Charges of a "propaganda campaign" by meat packers against the proposed 80 per cent "windfall" levy on proocessing tax refunds were injected in the hearingg by Chairman Pat Harrison, who inserted in the record a letter he said was written by officials of the Institute of American Meat Packers.

Letter Urges Trip Here.

Harrison said the letter urged members to buy a railroad ticket, come to Washington, see the committee chairman, and apperr at public hearings.

"It is part of a propaganda campaign to defeat this bill," Harrison charged, adding that hearings will be continued long enough to permit representatives of every affected interest to appear.

"They will be heard," he said, "but they will not be allowed to repeat."

Virtually invited by the chairman to conclude his testimony at the close of a long analysis of the bill, Alvord, who summarized the chamber's position, finished by asserting that the proposed measure abandons "ability to pay" tax principles, and is honeycombed with inequalities and complexities.

Administration claims for the bill, Alvord met with the following indictment:

"The 1937 budget, excluding the item for relief, will not and cannot be balanced, even assuming that all of the additional taxes recommended by the Administration are imposed.

Claim Exaggeration.

"The staggering statements of tax avoidance under our present system are unfounded.

"The inequalities, which the proposal is designed to remove, do not exist in fact; and the inequalities and discriminations which will result are far greater and more serious than those alleged to exist.

"Our income tax structure will be overburdened by the complexities, ambiguities, and inadequacies superimposed upon it by the pending bill."

Claims that the bill will remove inequities as between large and small shareholders, Alvord said could not have been offered "seriously."

"I find it difficult to appreciate how an inequity existing by reason of a 15 per cent rate will be removed merely by changing the rate and perhaps by increasing it to 42½ per cent," he said. "If small shareholders are bearing too great a relative burden under the present law, the remedy must lie in another direction."

Doubts Surtax Evasions.

Alvord said he doubted if 5,000 out of 250,000 corporations are accumulating surpluses for the purpose of avoiding surtaxes to large shareholders.

The witness predicted the proposed tax will have an adverse effect upon the economic and business condition of the country, retarding recovery and re-employment; will seriously impair the financial strength of corporations and depreciate the value of their bonds, notes and other evidence of indebtedness; will penalize corporations for circumstances beyond their control and will result in duplicate and multiple taxation of the same income.

Investment trusts, of the Massachusetts type, and joint stock companies, he said, because of the nature of their organization, will probably be taxed at the maximum rate of 42½ per cent, because they are limited in the volume of dividends they can pay to shareholders.

As Finance Committee hearings went forward, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., told reporters that he had said all he intended to on the subject of taxes, and "the rest is up to Congress." He reiterated the Administration's position in favor of processing tax additions to the bill. Asked if he had received any Congressional reaction on his processing tax stand, he said, "Nothing visible."

Although Chairman Harrison has intimated to reporters that he has a plan for raising some $380,000,000 more in revenue, requested by the Administration, he has consistently declined to reveal it. The only sweeping substitute for the Administration's proposals has been put forward by Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, who proposes upward revision of individual income taxes. King said last night he also is studying the advisability of superimposing on top of the corporation income tax a moderate additional tax for the purpose of inducing distribution of dividends.

As tax hearings resumed, Roy C. Osgood, vice president of the First National Bank of Chicago, told the committee the proposed bill would tend, from the long-time point of view, to jeopardize the position of common stockholders and definitely lead to greater instability in dividend payments.

He said it would increase the number of bankruptcies, and tend to diminish, if not dry up one of the most important sources of capital for investment in business enterprise, namely, corporate savings. He declared it would grossly discriminate as between the capital needs of corporations in various tyes of business.

Leading the chamber's witnesses, Clausen had pointed out the lack of "any fiscal program which by combining a reduction of expenditures with an equitable tax measure, is designed definitely to balance the budget."

He contended that estimated revenue proceeds are not only "highly uncertain and insufficient," but are "less than the budgeted increase in ordinary expenditures for the next fiscal year."

"We believe that any plan to balance the Federal budget is unworkable that does not provide for a collateral reduction in governmental expenditures," he said. "An increase of ordinary expenditures of over $3,000,000,000 from 1934 to 1937 is too fast a pace to keep up with."

measure, Henry B. Fernald, Montclair, N. J., certified public accountant, told the committee:

Stressing the complexity of the

"I need not tell you that it is an appalling thing to place these schedules before the ordinary taxpayer, with the requirement that he must, at his peril, make his computations under this law, swear to the correctness of his returns and accept the consequences for any errors he may make." He said the proposed tax "is not sound in principle; will prove unjust, discriminatory and difficult in practice, and will be impracticable of reasonable administration."

Witness' Faith In God Queried; Trial Delayed

By Frederic B. Tuttle.
A Staff Correspondent.

Cumberland, Md., May 4.—Whether William Henry Cleary, former tri-State gangster, turned State's witness, believes in God temporarily halted proceedings in the trial here today of Albert McDermott, alias John (Slim) Dunn, charged with first degree murder in the "mistaken identity" slaying of Allen B. Wilson, newspaper route agent.

No sooner had the Philadelphia gunman been brought to the stand late this afternoon by State's Attorney James H. Pugh, of Rockville, than Chief Defense Counsel Dersey Offutt raised the question that he was ineligible to testify against McDermott because of his lack of faith.

The jury was excused while attorneys approached Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan on the bench. The justice overruled Offutt's plea against Cleary's testimony, which was based on an old Maryland law, and decided that Cleary might take the stand against McDermott, who has been brought across the continent to stand trial for the murder of Wilson, a newspaper route agent, in front of the home of Edward (Mickey) McDonald, in Takoma Park October 23, 1934.

McDermott, who has been a prisoner in Alcatraz Penitentiary, off the California coast, until his indictment last January in the Wilson killing, stood trial alone today.

Originally scheduled to be tried jointly with Albert Sutton, who is charged with being the "brains" of the plot to kill McDonald, the prisoner found himself without a co-defendant when Thomas Dawson, Maryland Secretary of State and attorney representing Sutton, obtained from the bench official severance of the trials.

The State indicated it would move swiftly in the two trials, first weighing the evidence against McDermott, and then bringing Sutton separately into court.

McDermott is alleged to have been one of the "trigger" men who fired at Wilson from ambush in the attempt to murder McDonald in October, 1934.

He was brought into court from his special cell in the red brick jail here. When he awoke this morning, before dawn, he could look outside and see special flood lights playing across the jail yard. Such precautions have been taken here to safeguard McDermott and Sutton, who both are the property of the law.

City Interested.

Though today was general election day in Maryland, Cumberland took a vital interest in the trial.

From early morning hundreds of men and women who have heard of the notorious tri-State gang, of which McDermott and Sutton are alleged to have been members, crowded the old-fashioned courthouse.

When Sutton's attorney was granted severance, the man who is alleged to have tried to "put the finger" on McDonald was hustled back to his cell.

Most of today's session was devoted to the selection of a jury. In the end, a representative group of farmers and merchants filled the venire box.

One prospective talesman was asked by Judge Sloan if there was anything that might prejudice him against McDermott.

"Not a thing, your honor," he replied, "except I don't like that kind of a fellow."

The jury was completed late today. First witness called by the State was Joseph W. Kau, Washington police photographer. He identified pictures taken of the place where Wilson was killed by shots fired from behind a hedge in front of Mickey McDonald's house in Takoma Park. These pictures, the court learned, were taken a year after the killing.

Photographer Testifies.

Following Kau on the stand was Ira N. Gullickson, another Police Department photographer. Next came Detective Sergt. Theodore Volten, photographer for the Montgomery County police. They identified pictures of McDonald's house, the hedge and the spot where Wilson fell.

Just before the testimony began, 11 State's witnesses were sworn in.

In making his opening statement to the jury, Pugh said he would prove McDermott was one of five or six men present when Wilson was shot.

"I will also prove that McDermott went to New York for a machine gun to kill McDonald, and that he was one of several men who placed dynamite in McDonald's car in an earlier attempt to kill him," asserted Pugh.

Pugh first will seek a death sentence against McDermott. Then he will prosecute the case of Sutton. The defense today indicated that it would produce evidence to show McDermott was at his mother's bedside in New York at the time Wilson was mowed down, the victim of bullets intended for McDonald.

In all, 45 prospective jurors were questioned before the 12 men were selected.

None of the jurors under close questioning objected to capital punishment.

Foreman of the jury is Thomas J. Footen, the first man chosen. He is a job printer.

Adding a note of reality and tragedy to the trial, Mrs. Margaret Wilson, mother of three children and widow of the slain newspaper vender, appeared on the stand.

She told of learning of her husband's death.

Cleary will take the stand tomorrow to turn State's evidence once more, as he did in Rockville when Ernest Wellington Myers, driver of the car that carried the killers, was sentenced to life imprisonment.

McDermott, according to Cleary's previous testimony, shot Wilson.

Counsel to Ask Edith Maxwell's Release on Bail

Freedom Pending Review Of Conviction to Be Sought Today.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Efforts to obtain the release of Edith Maxwell, mountain-bred school teacher of Wise County, Va., accused of murdering her father with the heel of a woman's flimsy slipper, will be made today in Richmond by Attorney Charles Henry Smith, of Alexandria.

Smith, retained to defend Edith by The Washington Post—through a fund raised by contributions of readers—will apply to the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals for the accused girl's release on bail.

Since her conviction by a jury of Wise County mountaineers last November, Edith has languished in a tiny cell in the town jail at Wise. Her only companions have been bitter memories of that chill fall night when Trigg Maxwell, her blacksmith father, came home "roarin' drunk" to abuse members of his family.

Last March Edith was granted a review before the Virginia appellate court. Her case now stands third from the top on the Court of Appeals docket at Wytheville, Va. It is expected that testimony will begin early in June.

But meanwhile, Attorney Smith said he would continue efforts to seek her release on bail. When he appears before the Virginia Court of Appeals today, he will urge her immediate freedom pending hearings on the review.

"Under Virginia law," Smith said, "a prisoner may be admitted to bail—even though convicted of murder—after a writ of error has been granted."

The writ of error, on which the Court of Appeals based its decision to allow a review of the case, was filed March 9 and was granted ten days later. It held that Edith's conviction was not supported by the evidence. And to this end, Attorney Smith will appeal for a reversal of the original conviction and a new trial.

If Edith is freed it will mean her first taste of sunshine and fresh air since the day she was committed to the Blue Ridge Jail—many long, gloomy months ago.

East Potomac Swimming Pool Voted in Senate

King Thinks That Children Should Be Admitted Free; To Withdraw Bill.

Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, yesterday put through the Senate a bill to permit a private concessionaire to operate a public bathing pool in East Potomac Park and then stated he would move to reconsider and would withdraw the measure temporarily.

Upon the request of the National Capital Parks Office, King sponsored the bill, which would authorize the parks office to enter into contract with the operator of the East Potomac Park golf course to take over the pool as well.

"I didn't understand that," Senator King said. "I thought the parks office would operate the pool directly."

King said he would make an investigation to ascertain whether the pool under such operation would deprive poor and underprivileged children of the city its use.

"I think it ought to be open free of charge to the children of the city," he said.

The Senator recalled that he strongly opposed the abolition of the Washington Monument Grounds bathing pool, but that he was overruled.

The East Potomac Park pool is being constructed as a PWA project and is nearing completion.

King also reported favorably for the Senate District Committee a bill to change the name of the District Supreme Court to the "District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia."

His nurse at Allegany Hospital said today the attacks had ceased and that Doolan's condition was good.

Kin of Mrs. Black Dies of Gun Wound

Mrs. Roger D. Black, wife of the late Col. Roger D. Black, who died in New York recently, left Washington yesterday for Cape Elizabeth, Me., where, according to the Associated Press, her brother, Henry St. John Smith, 45, scion of a socially prominent family, died of a self-inflicted bullet wound.

Smith, a World War aviator, was found in the rear of his cottage at Cape Elizabeth by a motorist who was using a driveway through the Smith estate for a short cut, the Associated Press reported. A .38 caliber revolver lay near the body. The bullet had entered the left of the face, emerging near the right temple.

Smith leaves two children, Henry, jr., 10, and Nancy, 15, and another sister, Mrs. Henry G. Beyer, of Cape Elizabeth. He was a second cousin of Frances St. John Smith, who disappeared early in 1928 while a freshman at Smith College and whose body was found more than a year afterward in the Connecticut River near Springfield, Mass.

Col. Black, a retired Army engineer, had been an executive in the Public Works Administration. Funeral services for Smith will be held at Cape Elizabeth today.

Prince Georges Voting 10 to 1 For Roosevelt

Gambrill Beating Klemm by Wide Margin in Light Balloting.

The Democratic voters of Prince Georges County—the comparative few who cast ballots, at least—yesterday showed an overwhelming preference for President Roosevelt for a second term.

With 44 out of 45 polling places reported, the vote in the Democratic Presidential primary showed Roosevelt leading Col. Henry Breckinridge, of New York, by 10 to 1.

The vote:
Roosevelt, 2,524.
Breckinridge, 267.

Representative Stephen W. Gambrill, of the Fifth Congressional District, ran far ahead of Dr. John W. Klemm, of Mount Rainier, who has been seeking his seat in the House for a decade.

The vote in the county was:
Gambrill, 2,801.
Klemm, 460.

Runs Well in Chillum.

The largest vote for Dr. Klemm was polled in Chillum Precinct No. 1, which includes his own town of Mount Rainier.

There were no candidates for the Republican nomination for Congress.

Republican voters likewise had no chance to express a preference for the nomination for President. Col. Breckinridge, a vehement foe of the New Deal, made no speeches in Prince Georges County, nor did any of his representatives.

The vote in the county was unusually light, only about one voter out of ten casting a ballot.

The summary follows:

The vote in the Presidential primary, on the basis of incomplete returns, was:
Roosevelt, 2,051.
Breckinridge, 287.
Uninstructed, 71.

The vote in the Democratic Congressional race was:
Lewis, 1,743.
Plummer, 893.

Former Sheriff Plummer carried only one town, Gaithersburg. The vote there was 416 to 311 in his favor.

In a referendum, the proposal to legalize lotteries and games of chance for the benefit of volunteer fire departments, fraternal and civic organizations and churches was favored by better than 2 to 1 on the basis of incomplete returns.

The vote:
For the amendment to the law code, 679.
Against, 2253.

Organization candidates for delegates to the Democratic State convention were running ahead. They are Ralph H. Chase, Donald A. DeLashmutt, D. Jane Prince, Lacy Shaw, J. Bond Smith and J. Harry Welch.

The same was true of the candidates for delegates to the Republican State Convention. They are John W. Coffman, Walter W. Dawson and Frank Dwyer, Esther E. Fleishell, Thomas C. Kelley and Paul Sleman.

Delegates of Women's Union Are Guests at the White House

Mrs. Polly Brown, Alabama Department Store Cashier, Tells of Roosevelt Hospitality; Proud of Seeing the President.

The clock tolled 5.

The White House was quiet, not a stir except for a few of the servants going about their early morning chores in silence. Up on the third floor, Mrs. Polly Brown, Birmingham, (Ala.) department store cashier, turned over in her bed. She opened her eyes and looked about her.

But she couldn't go back to sleep—not even in the luxurious comfort of a White House bedroom. So she went to a desk in the room, got pen and paper and started writing home.

Mrs. Brown, you see, has been rising at 5 for many years. That's why she couldn't go back to sleep.

Here for the convention of the National Womn's Trade Union eague of America, Mrs. Brown is staying at the White House with other eague representatives from Alabama and New York.

Yesterday afternoon—after the about her experiences in Washing-league's meeting was over—she told ton, speaking in a slow Southern drawl, Alabama style.

"It's grand," she began.

"Yes," I saw the President. "That's what I wrote home about early this morning. It's wonderful being up here. I've never done anything like it before.

"This morning I got up about 7, after lying in bed for a while. We We had breakfast at 8. Yes—orange juice and toast and all that sort of thing. Really, it was real nice."

Roosevelt Wins Maryland

seven of the Democrats who stayed at home are opposed to him—the proportion of those opposed who voted—then he will have a difficult time carrying the State, unless he is able to offset this loss by attracting Republican votes.

The President beat Col. Breckinridge more than 6 to 1 in Baltimore City, when complete, but unofficial, returns from that city's 685 polling places had been tabulated. Mr. Roosevelt received 54,560 to 8,555 votes for the New York lawyer.

Thus in Baltimore City there were cast only 63,115 Democratic votes, or less than one-half of the Democratic vote normally cast in regular elections, indicating the apparent apathy of the voters. Ordinarily, the Democratic vote in Baltimore ranges between 120,000 and 140,000, with President Roosevelt four years ago receiving 160,309 votes, an all-time high.

The most spirited fight in Baltimore was the Palmisano-Polhaus battle, the third between the two men for the Congressional nomination in six years. Palmisano's vote was 13,571 against 10,892 for Polhaus. James C. Hunt, a third candidate for the Democratic Congressional nomination in the Third Maryland District, received 5,391 votes.

The outcome of the Palmisano-Polhaus fight enhances the prospects of Mayor Howard W. Jackson for his party's gubernatorial nomination two years hence. Jackson backed the Palmisano candidacy, while Polhaus had the support of the normally strong William Curran faction. Curran is a sworn enemy of Mayor Jackson in Baltimore City Democratic politics.

President Roosevelt sprang into the lead as the first returns from Baltimore City were tabulated, although at one time he was running only 4-to-1 over Col. Breckinridge. But the President's strength improved as the tabulation of the city votes advanced, until he finally reached his 6-to-1 lead and steadily maintained it to the completion of the count.

In the early returns Col. Breckinridge seemed stronger in the Maryland counties than in Baltimore City. For instance, in the Associated Press' first tabulation of the incomplete vote the result in 4 out of Somerset County's 23 polling places was Roosevelt, 110; Breckinridge, 32; in 12 out of Wicomico county's 31 polling places, Breckinridge, 191; Roosevelt, 590; 4 out of Worchester's 17 polling places, Breckinridge, 42; Roosevelt, 107; 7 out of Talbot's 17 polling places, Breckinridge, 120; Roosevelt, 312, and 20 out of Dorchester's 29 polling places, Breckinridge, 148; Roosevelt, 755.

In Washington County, however, the President later in the night was running approximately 10 to 1 over Breckinridge. In Charles County with the count complete, Roosevelt had 315 votes to 42 for Breckinridge.

SEC Asks Rein On Bondholder Organizations

Assails Protective Units in Report on Defaults by Municipalities.

In a vividly detailed outline of what happens to the investor in municipal securities when his community defaults its bonds, the Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday recommended to Congress the strict regulation of municipal bondholders protective committees.

Characterizing the situation as "extreamely chaotic and uncontroled," Commissioner William C. Douglas pointed out dangers to the small security hold under the present set-up.

With from $1,000,000,000 to $2,000,000,000 of outstanding municipal bonds in default, out of an estimated $20,000,000,000 total municipal indebtedness, the report emphasized that holders of the defaulted issues have "for practical purposes lost all control" of their bonds.

Act Already Passed.

The report had been prepared originally to bulwark previous recommendations that the Sumner-Wilcox act dealing with municipal debt readjustments be extended beyond its expiration date, May 24 of this year.

This, however, has already been done, and the act is still before the Supreme Court for dicision, with action expected late this month.

The indictment of present conditions contained in the report, while calmly phrased, was termed "scorching" by official sources. The commission's recommendations follow from conclusions listed below as the result of several years of investigation and research into the field. They held that:

"1. Municipal protective committees, possessed of broad powers and operating without supervision, have under their absolute dominion millions of dollars worth of securities over which the owners . . . have lost all control.

Faced With Exclusion.

"2. Bonholders who do not deposit with municipal protective committees are, as a rule, as much subject to the dominance of the committees as those who do deposit. If they do not deposit they are commonly faced with exclusion from the reorganization plan and little prospect of return on their investment.

"3. The banking houses which sold the municipal securities have a virtual monopoly over the municipal debt readjustment situation due to their domination over protective committees and their control over the lists of names and addresses of the scattered bondholders.

"4. Control of the municipal protective committees by these banking houses means not only that they have control over the profitable business patronage which committees dispense, but also that they are in an effective position to protect themselves against any fraud claims which the bondholders may have against them.

"5. Despite the fact that the municipal protective committee members are fiduciaries, they are the sole arbiters of the worth of their own services and the propriety of their expenditure of the bondholders' money. No proper accounting by these fiduciaries to the beneficiaries of the trust is made under the present unregulated system."

The report, made after the investigation by Commissioner Douglas, Abe Fortas, assistant director, and Prof. George H. Dession, of the Yale Law School, municipal corporation law expert, is based on testimony taken at public hearings before the commission, including bond committees at Coral Gables, Fla., and Asbury Park, N. J.

The report, under the first arraignment, outlines the procedure under which the bondholder, surrendering his securities by depositing them with the committee, loses all rights, with "no adequate possibility of obtaining relief in the courts from these deposit agreements . . . Municipal protective committees are virtually untouched by present statutes."

As a result of this hold, the report says that "the credit of hundreds of towns, villages and taxing districts" is "at their mercy."

Navy Air Chief

CAPT. ARTHUR COOK.

Cook Is Chosen To Head Navy's AeronauticUnit

Nomination of Successor to Rear Admiral King Will Go to Senate.

Capt. Arthur B. Cook, commander of the aircraft carrier Lexington, was nominated yesterday by President Roosevelt as the new chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Navy Department to succeed Rear Admiral Ernest J. King, who is to become commander of the fleet's aircraft base force.

In his new position, which must be confirmed by the Senate, Capt. Cook will have the rank of rear admiral.

The Navy Department yesterday also announced the promotion of Lieuts. Thomas E. Kent, of 2304 Tunlaw road, and Oscar M. Browne, of 1729 Irving street northwest, to the rank of lieutenant commander. Both are in the construction corps.

Born in Evansville, Ind., in 1881, Capt. Cook entered the Naval Academy in 1901. He served during the World War as flag lieutenant and fleet signal officer on the staff of the commander in chief of the fleet, receiving a special letter of commendation for his work from the department.

He qualified as a naval aviator at the Naval Air Station at Pensacola, upon graduation, being appointed commander of the aircraft carrier U. S. S. Langley. After two years in that post, in 1930, he was appointed to the staff of the commander, Aircraft Squadrons of the Battle Fleet. From 1931 to 1934, when he took command of the Lexington, he was assistant chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics.

As the new chief of the bureau, one of the major problems confronting Capt. Cook will be the training of pilots for the hundreds of new planes that are to be built by the Navy in the next five years to bring our air force up to treaty strength.

Immediate plans of the department will bring the present force of 1,311 planes up to 1,892 planes by July of next year. This year 500 fliers will be trained at Pensacola.

A graduate of the Naval Academy in 1929, Lieut. Commander Kent was transferred to the construction corps three years ago. Also transferred at the time was Lieut. Commander Browne, who graduated from the Naval Academy in 1930.

Union Women Urged to Speed Organization

68 at Convention Are Due to Hear Mrs. Roosevelt and Green Today.

Members of the National Women's Trade Union League of America last night were preparing for the second day of the twelfth annual convention here, after hearing Mrs. Rose Schneiderman, National president, appeal for unity and organization among women workers.

Clustered around six tables in the tea room of the Dodge Hotel, where the convention is being held, the 68 women delegates heard their president declare that the women of the Nation could control their own wages and their own working hours if they had the organization.

"The suffering of women during the depression," Mrs. Schneiderman said, "is something to be remembered." But now, she continued, women have their own organization.

At the afternoon session, officers' reports, legislative reports, and the report of the rules committee were made. Also several resolutions commending workers of the league were introduced.

Two of the principal addresses on the convention program will be delivered today. In the morning William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, will speak.

In the afternoon Mrs. Roosevelt—herself a member of the league—will deliver an address. The afternoon session will open promptly at 1:45 p. m.

Green was to have addressed the convention yesterday morning, but was unable to fulfill the engagement. His address today, league members said, will also be an appeal for organization among women workers.

At 10 a. m. yesterday the delegates gathered for the first of the convention sessions. They were welcomed to Washington by Miss Mary Anderson, chairman of the local convention committee; by Frank J. Coleman, secretary of the Washington Central Labor Union, and Joseph P. McCurgy, president, Maryland State and District of Columbia Federation of Labor.

Find Woman Dead; Murder Suspected

Buffalo, N. Y., May 4 (AP).—Mrs. Grace Elizabeth Matice, 38, attractive beauty shop operator, was found dead in her East Ferry street apartment tonight, and police said they believed she had been slain.

Assistant Detective Chief William J. Madigan said the body, fully clad, was found on a bed, and black and blue marks on the throat indicated the woman had been strangled.

A roomer, Hilton Cullen, 43, formerly of Detroit, was missing, and Madigan said he had assigned a secre of detectives to pick him up for questioning.

Madigan said the discovery was made by Mrs. Matice's nephew, Jack C. Dare, 18, of Pontiac, Mich. He has been living with Mrs. Matice and her son the last two months.

The son, Maxwell, 19, Madigan said, told him of repeated differences between his mother and Cullen.

The youths told the detectives Cullen was unemployed, was "very jealous" and had "sulked about most of the day."

Col. McMullen Enters Appeal On Fee Verdict

Lawyers Assert Statute of Limitations Annexes Indictment.

Contending the statute of limitations had operated to clear Col. Joseph I. McMullen, former chief of the patents section of the War Department, of charges that he accepted a fee from a private firm while the firm was interested in a legislative action, Attorneys William E. Leahy and William J. Hughes yesterday filed in District Supreme Court a motion for a new trial. They based their plea on the grounds, first, that the charge was nullified by the statute and, second, that there were numerous errors, both of omission and commission, during the trial, which reacted prejudicially to Col. McMullen.

The attorneys contended the legislation which Col. McMullen is charged with having violated was passed June 6, 1932, and that the $1,500 check he allegedly accepted for his services to the Cuban-American Manganese Co. was given July 6, 1932. From that they argued the indictment was returned more than three years after the alleged offense.

The indictment against Col. McMullen charged that he accepted compensation from the Cuban company for his services in opposing an excise duty on importations of manganese.

Arguments on appeal probably will be heard Friday.

What IS it that makes a FINE car FINE?

In every car that is manufactured, there is some sort of compromise between quality and price. If you build to a price standard, you sacrifice quality. If you build to a quality standard, you sacrifice low price. Cadillac has no criticism for those who build to a price. But, for itself, it prefers to let quality be the order of the day. Always, Cadillac builds as finely as it can—and lets the price fall where it may. That is why La Salle cannot be duplicated at or near its price. If you want La Salle style, beauty and quality, you must buy a La Salle. There is no substitute.

Asks for Retirement After 24 Hours in 'Vindication' Command.

Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood, who was punished by the War Department for his criticism of WPA funds as "stage money," was ordered home yesterday to await retirement at his own request after serving only one full day at his "vindication" command as head of the Sixth Army Corps Area with headquarters in Chicago.

Removed from the command of the Eighth Corps Area at San Antonio for his criticism of the Administration's spending program at executive hearings of a House subcommittee, Gen. Hagood spent seven weeks in inactive exile before he was restored to good standing three weeks ago.

That Gen. Hagood accepted the Chicago post solely to obtain vindication from the War Department was indicated by his action scarcely 24 hours after he had taken command, in formally asking retirement in a telegram to Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff.

"Harm to Prestige."

In a statement on his request for retirement because he felt he could not continue in the Army "without a sacrifice of my personal dignity and professional prestige," the general revealed that he had originally asked to be retired on March 17—at the height of popular furore over his removal, but had been persuaded to withdraw the request by President Roosevelt and Senator Byrnes, of South Carolina.

A tempest of protest was raised by Senators, Representatives and Administration opponents against Gen. Hagood's being relieved of his command and for a time the case threatened to become a big issue in the Presidential campaign.

Republican Senators sought in vain to launch a Senate inquiry into the removal while the American Liberty League distributed a pamphlet entitled "The Story of An Honest Man," attacking the disciplining of the general as an invasion of free speech and constitntional rights.

The furore was quieted only after official assurance that the general would be restored to active duty following a conference with the President at Charleston, S. C., on board the special train that was bearing the President South for his annual vacation. From Gen. Hagood's statement yesterday, it appears, that it was during the course of this conference that the President requested him not to retire.

Views Unchanged.

That Gen. Hagood's views on the Administration's spending policy have not changed was indicated in his statement by an announcement that he had "in preparation a book in which I shall show how the United States can get a very much better national defense at a very much less cost to the taxpayer."

A previous book by the general in which he sharply criticized the operations and organization of the "behind the lines" American unit in France during the war was one of the reasons given by the War Department for disciplining him.

Promptly on receipt of the general's retirement request, Gen. Craig issued a routine order relieving him of the Chicago command and ordering him home to await retirement. At the War Department it was said that the general has accumulated leave until August and that formal announcement of his retirement probably would be held up until then.

The third ranking senior officer in the Army, Gen. Hagood has been in service for more than 44 years and would have been retired automatically in July, 1937. Under Army regulations, he will be entitled to full retirement pay.

Consented "Reluctantly."

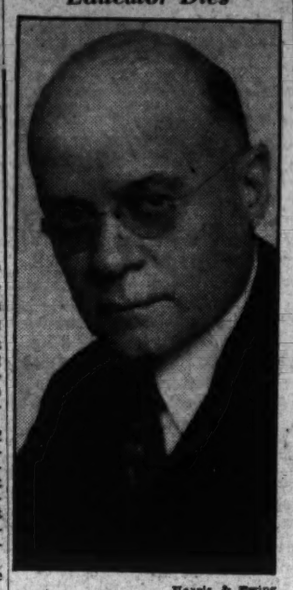
In his statement, Gen. Hagood said:

"My application for retirement has been pending since March 17. I asked for it the day after my arrival in Charleston (after removal from command at San Antonio) but reluctantly consented to it being temporarily held up, first at the solicitation of Senator Byrnes and subsequently at the very gracious request of the President himself.

"I have been restored to command and this has been taken by my friends as a vindication. But under the circumstances I do not feel that it will be of any advantage to the Army for me to remain on the active list for another year. There are certain phases of the case in question which makes me feel that I cannot do so without a sacrifice of my personal dignity and professional prestige.

"I am not being lured away from the Army by any offer of lucrative employment in civil life. While on leave of absence I have been doing temporary work with the Sears, Roebuck Co. as a consultant in matters of a budgetary nature. As soon as this work is finished I shall devote myself to writing. I have in preparation a book in which I shall show how the United States can get a very much better national defense at a very much less cost to the taxpayer."

Educator Dies



Harris & Ewing.

DR. HAYDEN JOHNSON.

Dr. Johnson, 62, Dies; Law Dean At National U.

Chancellor of School and Civic Leader Succumbs to Heart Attack.

Dr. Hayden Johnson, 62, chancellor of National University and dean of its law school, succumbed yesterday to a heart attack at his home, 2107 Nineteenth street northwest. He had been ill several weeks, but his death was unexpected.

As lawyer, administrator and educator, Dr. Johnson pursued a career in Washington which long since established him as an outstanding civic leader. Born here February 28, 1874, he had practiced law in the Capital since Georgetown University Law School awarded him a master of laws degree in 1896. He was graduated from the same school in 1895.

Funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon. Complete funeral arrangements will be announced today.

Dr. Johnson was the son of Robert M. and Katherine Johnson. His wife, who, with one brother, survives him, was the former Jeanette Blanchard Gatewood, of Kentucky. They were married in 1910. The brother is Frank M. Johnson, of Denver, Colo.

Succeeded Roper.

Appointed to the Board of Education in July, 1932, to succeed Daniel C. Ropper, now Secretary of Commerce, Dr. Johnson was elected president of the board the following October. He served one three-year term.

As head of the school board, Dr. Johnson's insistence led to meetings of its various committees being opened to the public. Previously they had been closed, although the semi-monthly meetings of the board proper were open.

Tall, parfly bald and an insatiable reader, Dr. Johnson served 20 years as a member of the District Bar examining committee and was one of the outstanding members of the District Bar Association, which will name a group of honorary pallbearers.

In 1925 National University awarded Dr. Johnson the LL. D. degree. Six years later he was elected as the eleventh chancellor of the Thirteenth street institution, succeeding to a vacancy caused by the death of Dr. Charles F. Carusi, also a former member and president of the Board of Education.

Dr. Carusi and John Paul Earnest were among Dr. Johnson's law partners when he began his practice here almost 40 years ago. Their offices were in the Columbian Building.

May Fete and Athletics To Mark 'Health Day'

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 4.—"Health Day" will be observed Thursday in the city's public schools with a parade; the holding of the May queen's court, and interclass athletic events. The exercises will open when the high school students, led by their band, march to the elementary school. The combined student bodies then will return to the high school where, before the court of the May queen, Norma Pitts, the "5-pointers" will unfold their program.

Associated Power Output.

New York, May 4.—For the week ended April 25, Associated Gas & Electric System reports net electric output of 74,656,016 units, which is 12.9 per cent above the comparable figure a year ago. For the four weeks ended April 25, the output was 305,228,905 units, or 12.3 per cent above last year.

Dillinger Lawyer Starts Sentence

Chicago, May 4 (AP).—Louis Piquett, one-time counsel for John Dillinger, started tonight to serve a two-year Federal sentence for harboring Homer Van Meter, a Dillinger aid, when Federal agents were seeking the gang.

Two appeals of Piquett for a 30-day stay of sentence in order to take care of personal business were denied and the lawyer was placed in the custody of Chief Deputy United States Marshal Joseph Tobin. The officer took Piquett to the county jail, where he said the prisoner would be held until a group of future inmates of Leavenworth Prison leaves from here.

Piquett's conviction, almost a year ago, came after he won acquittal in Federal Court on a similar charge involving Dillinger. His plea that his services to the one-time public enemy No. 1 were only those of an attorney to his client prevailed. But the Government won a guilty verdict when it showed he arranged a hideout and face lifting operation for Van Meter, who was not his client. Van Meter was slain in August, 1934, about a month after Dillinger was killed.

Special Coin Voted.

The House passed yesterday a bill authorizing the coinage of special 50-cent pieces to commemorate the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg, according to the Associated Press.

Officer Links His Colleagues To 'Lash' Death

By the Associated Press.

Bartow, Fla., May 4.—Declaring he was "afraid to tell" the truth at a police inquiry, a Tampa policeman today gave testimony implicating former fellow officers in the kidnaping of Eugene F. Poulnot, who, with two other unemployed labor organizers, was flogged, tarred and feathered last November 30.

Joseph Shoemaker, one of Poulnot's companions, died of his injuries. Seven Tampa policemen are on trial here on charges of kidnaping Poulnot.

M. L. Williams, patrol wagon driver, also testified that Sergt. C. A. Brown, jr., one of the defendants, altered the docket book in which the victims were booked for communistic investigation. A parade of policemen have preceded him to the stand and prosecution attorneys said more would follow.

Wililams testified that he "heard some one hollering and started outside," in describing the scene at the police station after the flogging victims, rounded up in a raid upon a meeting of the Modern Democrats at a private home, were released.

"A car was parked in front of the door. Poulnot was in the car and Bridges (John P. Bridges, a defendant) was in the back seat, holding Poulnot. Poulnot was kind of rarin'—putting up some kind of fight."

Armed with a transcript of testimony they gave at a police investigation of the matter, Defense Attorney Pat Whitaker has been asking all the police witnesses on cross-examination if they did not say that they could identify nobody concerned with the abduction. Williams explained as follows:

"I was under the impression I was not supposed to tell what I knew. Chief Tittsworth (R. G. Tittsworth, on trial as an accessory) gave me the impression I was not supposed to tell. I was just afraid to tell. I didn't care to lose my job."

Tension on Rhine Eased, Nazis Release Troops

Paris, May 4 (AP).—Troops held under the colors since April 7 because of international tension over Germany's military occupation of the Rhineland, will be released on May 15, it was announced tonight. The troops had been due for release from their military service term, but were held in readiness for emergency after the term expired.

Bone Sees 'OGPU' of U. S.

ernment, formerly confined largely to the United States Secret Service and the Justice Department's Bureau of Investigation, have been expanded widely in the past few months to guard against fraud in broad-scale spending of Federal funds.

PWA, WPA Units.

The Department of Interior has a unit of some 300 men operating under Louis Glavis, dovetailing into the extensive PWA set-up, while the Works Progress Administration has some 98 operatives under Dallas Dort policing from within WPA activities. The Resettlement Administration is said to employ some 46 investigators.

Bone's speech recalled charges made by Senator Rush Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, during the youthful Senator's bitter controversy with Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, over West Virginia relief. Holt claimed his office desk had been jimmied and papers ransacked.

In recent weeks an undercurrent of gossip has run through Capitol lobbies, involving the rumored tapping of phone connections into the offices of two Republican Senators, but the latter charges have never been aired publicly by those supposed to have been affected.

Last week Representative John J. O'Connor (Democrat), of New York, reported his office entered for the second time in recent months, but no charges of espionage were involved.

Cites Specific Case.

Asked by reporters to be more specific in his charges, Senator Bone said:

"In at least one case, the investigative unit of one of the Government departments apparently undertook to usurp the functions of the Senate by apparently undertaking to pass upon the qualification of the campaign expenses of a member of the Senate.

"It so happens that the campaign expenses of this Senator were very, very small, but they were inquired into in detail, and a representative or representatives of this investigative unit made trips into this Senator's State, took sworn testimony regarding contributions of as little as $10 or $15 made to the Senator's campaign fund. No explanation of this action was given, even when this activity came to light and an explanation was sought.

"Another instance—thousands of dollars were spent by another department for an investigation inspired by people of evil reputation who were hired by or in alliance with business competitors of the man under investigation."

Bone said he took the Senate floor "with the thought that the Senate might well look into the matter, because such an inquiry might have a sobering influence upon those who so freely spend Government money, either unintelligently, and therefore uselessly or wantonly, and for personal or political motives."

The Washington Senator, who won his seat in the chamber by warring with power interests in his State, and has been active recently in behalf of more drastic munitions legislation, confined his Senate remarks to about 300 words.

He called attention to a recently published article which he said condemned "certain alleged practices of so-called undercover men employed by some Government departments, and who are charged with a low form of spying and general, all around espionage."

"I am concerned over the fact that such practices may exist," he told the Senate.

"If they are not checked by the salutary force of public opinion, they might readily lend themselves to the most odious form of oppression and coercion and might easily become the basis for what might amount to political blackmail."

He then made his one reference to the famous Soviet espionage unit.

"In the near future," he said, "I shall have something to say about this matter, and probably offer a resolution looking to an investigation by the Senate, to determine the extent to which its own members may have been the object of attentions at the hands of this nascent and budding OGPU.

"If there be nothing to this now so frequently repeated charge, it might be well to lay this ghost of gossip by the heels, and have an end to the undercurrent of charges and crosscharges now so frequently indulged in when members of Congress meet for frank, private discussion of what is going on."

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Antonia Brico, conductor of the New York Women's Orchestra, speaks on "Musical Attitudes Here and Abroad" before members of the Washington Music Teachers' Association and other auditors in Wesley Hall Monday night.

By and large, the attitudes of civilized communities toward music differ in intensity and in degree of intelligence and not in the primary matter of aesthetic interest. In contrasting the American and European scenes, Miss Brico placed the strongest emphasis upon the differences in the educational systems and in the relation between government and art. Musical education in this country, despite a steady improvement of public school conditions in the last few decades, is still too much of a haphazard affair, and Federal and State regimes are still laggard in fostering those essential institutions, the orchestra and the opera.

In the course of her remarks, Miss Brico more than once referred to the fact that the natural heritage of the child is a musical education, and that the taste for music cannot be encouraged too early in life. Knowledge creates appreciation, she said, and the sooner the foundation of knowledge is laid the more sound and abiding will be the individual's enjoyment of the art.

Furthermore, she made a statement which happens to be a favorite thesis of mine—that we like what we know and show a decided tendency to dislike, or at least to shy away from, the unknown. The man who has never heard a Beethoven symphony distrusts the experience of hearing one, but after becoming familiar with the composition, he not only enjoys listening to it but feels curiosity about the other eight.

It is, as Miss Brico pointed out, the repeated hearing of certain works that brings about their eventual popularity. Because the last three symphonies of Chaikovski have been the most frequently performed in our concert halls, they have become thoroughly established in the orchestral repertoire, but we might enjoy the other three just as much were we given the opportunity to become acquainted with them.

British, French Armed Trucks Gather UpDead

Addis Ababa Is Reported Ruled by Mutineers With Machine Guns.

Paris, May 4 (AP).—Armed trucks from the French and British legations in riot-torn Addis Ababa went out on the streets tonight in search of dead and wounded, the French minister advised his government by wireless.

The minister, Paul Bodard, also reported that an Italian airplane fell into Addis Ababa but gave no details.

Earlier, the minister said Ethiopian soldiers on guard duty at the French Legation mutinied and attacked the building. Later messages from him disclosed that trucks had been sent out from the legation, hence it was believed here the threat had been withstood.

Bodard said there are 2,000 foreign refugees in the French Legation. A British armed truck returned to the legation with the bodies of two women and a wounded English missionary.

All Addis Ababa, the minister advised, was occupied by mutinous soldiers armed with machine guns. He expressed fear they planned a mass assault on foreign legations, having already looted native quarters.

Skeletons of 11 Killed In Florida Storm Found

Tavernier, Fla., May 4 (AP).—The finding of 11 more sun-bleached skeletons of persons who died in the howling tropical storm that swept the Matecumbes last Labor Day was reported here today to Peace Justice E. R. Lowe, bringing the total of known dead to 524.

Justice Lowe said West Coast fishermen sent word they found seven bodies on Cape Sable Island and four at the cove on Middle Cape, some 50 miles across Florida Bay from the low lying coral isles where hurricane winds and water battered homes of Key residents and camps of World War veterans.

California Bill Banning Gambling Ships Voted

The House yesterday passed without a dissenting vote the Collins bill to prevent operation of so-called gambling ships off the coast of California outside the three-mile limit. The measure now goes to the Senate.

It makes unlawful the transportation of passengers from any port in the United States to "any ship, barge, boat or vessel anchored or standing three or more miles offshore and engaged in a business prohibited by law."

which the Emperor and his family already had boarded.

Also boarding the ship with the imperial fugitives were Ras Kassa, Ras Desta Demtu, Ras Gheta Chou, Foreign Minister Herouy and other Ethiopian nobles.

Ras Seyoum, the Black Fox, whose armies fought savagely on the northern front, was expected to arrive on another refugee train from Ethiopia late tonight.

Foreign Diplomats Appeal to Badoglio

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Rome, May 4.—Sir Sidney Barton, British minister to Addis Ababa, today appealed urgently to the Italian high command to occupy the flame-scarred capital as soon as possible to prevent further looting and murder by blood-crazed native warriors, the official Italian news broadcaster announced.

A government spokesman announced that France has asked Italy "to hurry the march of Marshal Pietro Badoglio's troops to Addis Ababa because of the gravity of the situation created by riots." The spokesman declared that Italy already has adopted measures "within the present possible limits" to aid the barricaded legations.

Sir Sidney's appeal was in the name of the diplomatic corps and said that the foreign legations were in imminent danger of being overwhelmed.

Meanwhile, Premier Benito Mussolini announced that he will order a nation-wide test mobilization "soon," presumably to announce the fall of Addis Rbaba.

At a meeting of the Chamber of Deputies, Il Duce said: "I have ordered a general mobilization of the Italian people. To the Italian people I will make the announcement you are expecting, and to the Italian people, as on October 2, I will speak."

All Italy had expected Mussolini to announce occupation of Addis Ababa at today's meeting of the chamber. Millions gathered around radios to hear the glad news from Il Duce's own lips.

The public and diplomatic tribunes of the chamber were packed and thousands gathered in the square before the parliament building. Mussolini arrived at 4:30 p. m. and was cheered wildly. Even the deputies joined the cheering and sang Fascist songs.

Costanzo Ciano, father of Count Galeazzo Ciano, airplane squadron commander in East Africa, presided over the meeting.

"The Ethiopian empire is now at our mercy," Ciano said.

"Despite sanctions, the Negus' armies have benn defeated. Even the Negus' private army, which was commanded and trained by European officers, has been crushed."

Deputies booed the mention of the European officers.

"Now our flag is respected and welcomed everywhere in Ethiopia," Ciano said. "We are grateful to our fighting forces, but above all to you, O Duce."

Following Mussolini's brief address, in which he also eulogized the late King Fuad I of Egypt, the chamber recessed until 4 p. m. tomorrow.

Virgino Gayda, editor of Giornale D'Italia, said editorially that Emperor Haile Selassie's departure from Djibouti on the British cruiser Enterprise constitutes a disputable procedure. It was a singular coincidence that the warship arrived at Djibouti at the same moment that the Ethiopian party did."

Colladay Warns Foes

his opponents. The slate of his opponents was elected.

The 43 delegates elected in the primary and the 43 delegates at large chosn by them now constitute the Republican State committee for the District of Columbia, of which Leo A. Rover is chairman. The committee meets tonight to choose officers and Thursday night to elect delegates and alternates to the Cleveland convention, as well as national committeeman and national committeewoman.

Colladay's opponents say they are confident they will wrest control of the organization from him.

In his statement last night, Colladay said:

"This is the first time in the history of the Republican State Committee in and for the District of Columbia since it was organized in 1916 that any serious irregularities have occurred.

"This is the first time that a delegate, in this instance Fracis Wells, who for more than 40 years was an employe of the District Government and who for more than 10 years lived in the district from which he was elected, has been unseated on what, to say the least, was a hasty trial and incomplete evidence."

The contest against Wells, Colladay said, was filed Thursday about 2 p. m. The meeting at which the elected delegates were to be seated was held that night. Although Wells had been elected on April 17, Colladay said, no notice was given him of the contest, and he learned of it only through a telephone call from Colladay to Committee Chairman Rover.

A hasty defense was prepared, according to the Colladay statement, and the contest was heard only a half hour before the meeting for the seating of delegates. The committee on credentials decided that Wells did not live in the district in which he was elected delegate, and he was excluded from the meeting.

The Colladay statement charged that one member of the credentials committee does not live in the city, although he once did. It pointed out also that Wells served as an alternate delegate to the 1932 convention in Chicago, having been elected from the same district in which he is now held not to reside. The question of residence was raised at that time, according to the statement, and decided in his favor.

Engert Entered U.S. Diplomatic Service in 1912

Defender of Legation at Addis Ababa Is 46; Has 2 Children.

By the Associated Press.

A quiet, bespectacled former school teacher laid aside diplomatic pen yesterday to take up the sword in defense of his East African legation.

He was Cornelius Van H. Engert, United States Minister to Ethiopia, of Dutch parentage, native of Vienna, Austria, and a naturalized American citizen.

He led the defense of the legation at Addis Ababa against a shooting band of natives turned marauders as Italian troops neared the mountain capital.

At his side in the heat and smoke of the siege was his wife, who remained to encourage the native servants, with their families huddled in the American compound. The Engert children—an 11-year-old boy and 7-year-old daughter—on Sunday were taken, with others, to the comparative safety of the British Legation.

Aided by Vice Consuls.

Manning rifles with Engert and others in the compound were his two vice consuls, William Miller Cramp, 32, of Philadelphia, and Robert Leland Hunter, 31, of Milbank, S. Dak.

Mrs. Engert is the former Sara Morrison Cunningham, of San Francisco, Calif., and a niece of Mrs. Whitelaw Reid.

She met her husband in San Francisco, from which city he was appointed to the American diplomatic service in 1912.

The children were take into Addis Ababa with a governess to visit their father several weeks ago.

Engert, a lean man of slight stature, is 49 years old and one of the few persons in the American diplomatic service of foreign parentage.

He attended the University of California, where he later was a teacher in history, and also Harvard University. There also were periods of schooling in Switzerland.

Student Interpreter.

He was appointed to the American diplomatic service as a student interpreter at the embassy in Turkey on March 12, 1912, and served as interpreter to the American consulate general at Constantinople until 1914, when he was assigned as vice consul in that city. He later served details as vice consul at Bagdad, Syria, and in Palestine.

It was during his early years of service in this territory that he acquired the intimate knowledge which qualified him as one of the State Department's outstanding experts on Near Eastern affairs.

He served later as a secretary of legation at The Hague, was returned to Constantinople in 1919 and the following year was assigned to Teheran, Iran. Subsequent posts were at Havana, San Salvador, Santiago, Caracas, Peiping and Cairo.

It was while serving as secretary in the American Legation at Cairo that Engert was appointed last spring to his present post. He first went to Addis Ababa as charge d'affaires of the Legation and recently was promoted to the full rank of minister.

Entered Service as Clerk.

Cramp entered the American foreign service in June, 1931, as a clerk in the American Consulate at Cairo.

In October of that year he was assigned to Istanbul as a vice consul and there passed examinations qualifying him as a secretary in the diplomatic service. He served in Belize, British Honduras, in 1932, London in 1933 and was assigned to Addis Ababa in July, 1934, where he became third secretary of the legation.

Hunter entered the foreign service in 1928 after serving for a year in the United States immigration service. His first assignment was as a clerk in the American Consulate at Winnipeg, Canada. A year later he was made vice consul there.

He served successively at Windsor, Canada, in 1931 and at Baghdad in 1934, where he was made a vice consul. He was transferred from that post to Addis Ababa.

in claiming power for his party, declared his readiness to head a popular front cabinet of Socialists, Communists and Radical Socialists. Doubt that Communists would share in the government was expressed, however, in chamber lobbies.

Premier Albert Sarraut called a meeting of the cabinet tomorrow to consider the new political complexities and possible financial repercussions.

In Office Until June 1.

Under the constitution the present cabinet will remain in office until the new Chamber convenes, June 1.

With all but 4 of the 618 seats accounted for in the hamber, the standing was:

Leftists	378
Center	137
Rightists	99

Tomorrow's cabinet meeting scheduled for 3 p. m., was postponed until 4:30 p. m. to allow the ministers to have closing bourse quotations for the discussion.

Marcel Regnier, minister of finance, announced he would make "a full expose" of the financial situation.

Regents of the Bank of France held a long meeting during the afternoon to discuss the financial situation and will meet again tomorrow, when financial experts expect to arrive at a decision to raise the discount rate and increase the rate on advances on securities.

Trammell Unchanged.

Senator Trammell, Florida Democrat, remained seriously ill last night of complications following an attack of influenza and pleurisy.

His physician, Dr. Walter A. Bloedorn, who reported "encouraging" signs in Trammell's condition during the week-end, said there had been "no material change" yesterday.

Anslow attended to. In view of somewhat hazardous nature of journey, he took with him Chief Radioman Tanner, my chauffeur, my two native legation guards and five rifles. And as two newspapermen (believed to be Ben Ames, of the United Press, and C. H. Angelopoulos, of the International News Service) and Hal du Berrier (an American aviator) had left at 6 a. m. to try to locate Italians, we were a rather depleted garrison. It is extremely likely that bandits had been watching departures since last night and concluded place had been practically evacuated."

"However, thanks to loyalty of our native servants, including cooks, who at once rushed to defend gates with only a few revolvers, spears and swords until the rest of us arrived with pistols and shotguns, we made much greater show of numbers than attackers expected. After brisk exchange of shots, in course of which at least one bandit was either killed or wounded, they were driven off.

"I cannot speak too highly of comrades who grasped at once the importance of energetic action. Pitts, Cavannah (radio men), and Hunter (Robert L. Hunter, a legation secretary), without waiting for orders, rushed fearlessly to take up strategic positions, while Hartman and Spencer showed fine sense of discipline and co-operation.

"Whole incident proves again that a few armed white men can easily hold their own provided opponents are not in overwhelming numbers. I am particularly encouraged by the attitude of our native help mentioned above.

"However, I am informing British Legation of what happened and if situation does not improve shall act in accordance with letter and spirit of your instructions of May 3."

Secretary Hull had told Engert not to take undue chances and to evacuate the legation if necessary.

The next message, dated at 11 a. m. (4 a. m. Washington time) revealed that the legation had received reinforcements in th person of a man with a machine gun.

Took Advantage of Respite.

The message said:

"Cramp got back safely at 9:30 and reports that on outward journey attitude of natives seemed more friendly than on return journey. Reason is probably they had heard rumors that city would be occupied today and when nothing happened they took advantage of respite to continue their depredations.

"White flags are now flying on most houses.

"Several buildings are still ablaze in town and random firing continues unabated.

"Bergman (Dr. G. C.) and Stadin (Dr. A. R. Stadin, whose wife was killed in the first onslaught of the bandits) of Seventh Day Adventist Mission, well and require no assistance for the present. It is said that one of our messengers was killed en route to this legation. (This is believed to refer to a native messenger.)

"Three German men and one woman have taken refuge in mission compound. Servants apparently loyal.

"We now have one submachine gun which by odd coincidence is Italian. Was brought by policeman who fled to our compound for protection because he used to sell Cramp Abyssinian curios."

Following dispatch of this message the situation evidently became more desperate, and Engert sent his first request for help. The request that was relayed 14,000 miles to the neighboring British Legation.

It said:

"Two messengers I sent to British Legation today could not get through. As communication with that legation is essential if we are to remain here, please communicate immediately via London to Sir Sidney Barton, British Minister here, that he get in touch with me. Kindly state also that with the assistance of a few Sikhs and one Lewis gun we could hold this legation if Italians arrive within a few days. I feel it would be a great pity to be obliged to abandon it and radio to certain destruction after holding it for three strenuous days. Please acknowledge receipt."

The State Department immediately communicated by telephone with the British foreign office in London. The foreign office promised to relay the message immediately.

The next message at 5 p. m. (10 a. m. Washington time) increased anxiety here. It said:

"Situation is getting worse. Several direct shots have been fired at the legation building, including radio stations, since this morning and two native women in our servants' quarters have been seriously wounded."

It was seven hours before the next message arrived. It was somewhat reassuring, although it revealed that British help had not arrived.

"British Legation was apparently unable to get in touch with us," Engert wirelessed. "Feel confident we can at least hold out until tomorrow, as the situation has not changed for the worse since this afternoon, owing to rain; perhaps even slightly improved. Government buildings of old Ghibbi appear to be on fire.

"My staff behaving splendidly despite great strain."

Late in the day Robert W. Bingham, American Ambassador in London, told the State Department in a telephone conversation that it was possible that the appeal for help had not reached the British Legation in Addis Ababa.

Messages from the little radio station at the legation came faintly into the great naval station at Arlington. They were copied by a radio operator and sent over a telegraph wire to the State Department, where they were decoded. Copies of the messages were sent to President Roosevelt, but there was no comment at the White House. Operators are kept on duty 24 hours a day waiting for the crackling messages that mean the legation still is holding out.

Balkan Entente Moves to Form Nations League

Leaders Gather to Combat Italy's Influence and Geneva's Failure.

By the Associated Press.

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, May 4.—The Balkan entente considered a proposal today to constitute itself into a Little League of Nations for southeastern Europe.

Foreign ministers here for an emergency meeting obviously were seriously disturbed by Geneva's failure to accomplish many of its aims. So the need of a workable substitute was advanced as one of the most urgent questions when the first session opened late today.

It was swept aside momentarily by other issues on which there have been disagreements and there were signs that Geneva's weakness might result in the strengthening of the Balkan combination, composed of Turkey, Greece, Yugoslavia and Rumania.

Even Greece, which is often regarded as the least enthusiastic of the Balkan Pact members, indicated it was inclined to become a wholehearted working member.

Premier John Metaxas, of Greece, in a statement to the press, stressed the desirability of stability and that idea gained momentum after the arrival of Foreign Minister Nicolas Titulescu, of Rumania.

Diplomatic experts accompanied the ministers to the session, as it was persistently reported that the Mediterranean question and the upward surge of Italian influence were to be discussed.

Diplomatic circles reported the Balkan members agreed on terms whereby Turkey will be allowed to refortify the Dardanelles. Informed quarters said a Greek desire to fortify some of its island possessoins in the Aegean would also be considered. Such a step is at present forbidden by the Lausanne Treaty.

Medal Given Roosevelt.

The Grand Cross of Honor and Merit of the Cuban Red Cross was conferred on President Roosevelt yesterday at a brief White House ceremony.

Eduardo T. Montoulieu, treasurer of the Cuban society, made the presentation. He said it was in recognition of the President's humanitarian policies in helping storm and other disaster sufferers in foreign countries as well as his own land.

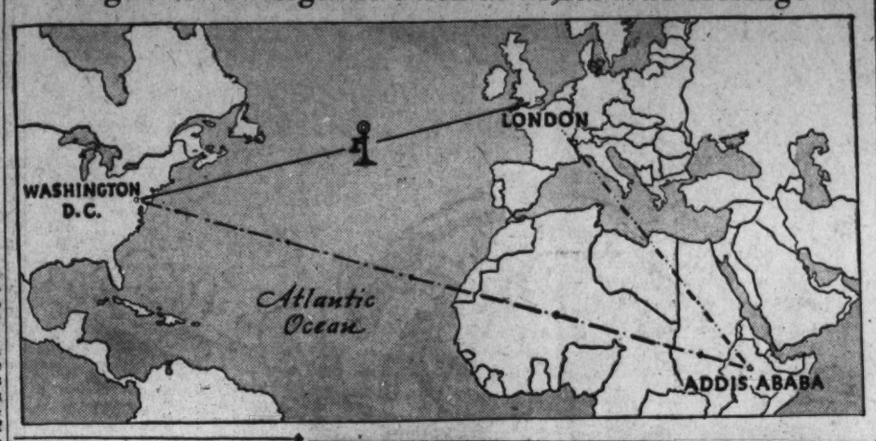
Engert Asks Neighbor's Aid in 14,000-Mile Message



Britain's Envoy Ordered to Aid U. S. Ministry

States Ambassador, went to the foreign office upon instructions from the State Department and asked if the British Legation in Addis Ababa could aid the American Legation.

Requested Guard.

Minister-resident Engert had requested a few Sikhs and a machine gun. The British Legation is guarded by a force of 150 Sikhs.

As messages from Addis Ababa told how white flags flew over the remaining inhabited houses in preparation for the Italians' arrival, the first government pronouncement on the League's situation was delivered.

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin and Eden, meeting a deputation from the League of Nations Union, emphasized that Great Britain will have to take stock of the League's position in the light "of the apparent failure of collective action in this dispute."

The question of reform of the Covenant, they said, "would need very careful consideration."

Riots Continue, London Is Informed.

Copyright, 1936, by United Press.

London, May 4.—Rioting and looting continued unabated in Addis Ababa tonight, with the American, French, Turkish and Belgian legations under attack by frenzied mobs.

The latest message from British correspondents said:

"Rescuers brought into the British Legation a young Belgian, who said a large gang of looters armed with machine guns beseiged his house. He and his two companions fought until their ammunition was exhausted. They shot 25 looters dead and then caught the British rescue lorry.

"Natives still are looting and firing their rifles in the air. There is considerable danger from falling bullets.

2,000 in Compound.

"It is calculated that 2,000 refugees, representing 23 different nationalities, are sheltering in the British Legation compound. Many arrived entirely destitute. Their misery has been increased by the heavy rain now falling.

"Many fires are still burning in the center of the city. A large part of the town has been destroyed. It is estimated that at least ten Europeans have been killed during the last two days. They are mostly Greeks and Armenians.

"Dr. Melly, of the British Red Cross, who was shot through the lung by a rioter, has been brought to the British Legation. His condition is likely to remain critical for some days."

Dr. Alfred Buxton, British missionary surgeon, was shot in the leg. Two Ethiopian mission converts, riding in the same lorry, were killed.

Tire Prices Raised Average of 10%

Akron, Ohio, May 4 (AP).—Akron rubber companies announced today a tire price increase averaging 10 per cent. Spokesmen for all the firms confirmed a report that the dealer discount schedule of November 1, 1934, was restored by an agreement reached at conferences over the week-end. The price increases are 11 per cent on first line tire, 13 per cent for second line, 5½ per cent on third line and 7½ per cent on fourth line.

British Newsman Weds Amid Addis Ababa Riots

Addis Ababa, May 4 (AP).—With traditional British nonchalance, a British newspaperman was married today to the accompaniment of bandit shooting. G. L. Steer, a British citizen and correspondent for the New York Times and London Times, married Margareta de Harreros, a special correspondent of the Paris newspaper Le Journal.

The ceremony was performed within the British Legation while Sikh soldiers stood guard against mobs in the capital.

Two Nuns Shot As Madrid Mob Fires Churches

Story Sisters Fed Poison in Candy to Children Stirs Riot; 40 Hurt.

By the Associated Press.

Medrid, May 4.—Nearly two-score persons were wounded and valuable church property destroyed today in the most violent anti-clerical rioting in Spain since the Left election victory in February.

Rioters set fire to more than a dozen Catholic churches, schools and monasteries. The violence began yesterday when rumors were spread among Leftists that nuns had distributed poison candy to girls in their charge.

Two nuns were wounded when they came into the line of fire as they led children from a burning convent.

Police Powerless.

The disorders centered in the capital, but there were also scenes of violence in the Province of Cadiz.

Heavy forces of shock police were powerless to cope with mobs of rioting extremists, aroused by the whispered rumors that the Catholic clergy was "poisoning children."

The mobs applied torches to churches, convents, schools and rectories in the Cuadro Caminos and Chamartin sections on the outskirts of the capital, and in suburban Tetuan.

Gasoline was taken from filling stations and the tanks of passing automobiles to be used in the work of destruction.

Three churches and two rectories were destroyed by incendiaries in Cadiz.

Priests Driven Out.

In two villages priests were driven from town and warned they would be killed if they returned.

The capital was quiet tonight but was patrolled by heavy forces of police. Crowds of the curious visited the smoldering remains of buildings destroyed by rioters.

Three of those injured were French citizens who happened to be passing when the rioting began.

As your Cunard White Star liner comes to dock, a seaman heaves the small line... his timing expressive of the "shipshape" way each man aboard does any job. This attitude is more than something prescribed. It originates in a personal sense of tradition, passed on by fathers and grandfathers before them. This heritage... is shared by those who serve you personally, deepened by the Line's near-century of experience. It's the intangible which explains why waiters remember your preferences in food... why stewards are quick to anticipate desires... why every crossing is a perfect one.

The Deeper Parallel.

It is not merely Addis Ababa which has fallen before the drive of the Fascist legions. Geneva, as the seat of the League of Nations, is almost equally in a position where capitulation to the aggressor seems inevitable.

Indeed the anarchy let loose in the streets of the Ethiopian capital is paralleled, less dramatically but more seriously, in the international anarchy which is stimulated by the success of Mussolini's policy of treaty violation. If sanctions now collapse, and it is difficult to see how they can be successfully maintained, the effort to attain security by collective action in behalf of treaty sanctity will be at an end, at least for the immediate future. Whether a nation shall continue to observe chafing treaty obligations will then become largely a matter of whether it feels strong enough to repudiate them successfully.

Mussolini has given enormous stimulus to fulfillment by Hitler of the program of German expansion outlined in Mein Kampf. The united front against Germany, which France has sought to build for 17 years, is broken, ironically enough partly by French indecision in the Ethiopian dispute. The chance of any serious British opposition to a German thrust in Austria will now diminish in just such degree as sanctions against Italy cease to operate.

It may be that Germany will at this juncture show a temperance and a quality of constructive leadership which will help to pull Europe together. But it may also be the case that Hitler will choose the moment when Italian preoccupation in Ethiopia is at its height to declare Anschluss with Austria and start the long-expected drive, narrowly thwarted during the World War, for hegemony over Central Europe. If so, Italy will be in no position to stop the thrust; nor is her Fascist ruler likely to receive much support from a left-wing government in France.

From the outset it has been clear that much more than the fate of Haile Selassie was at stake in the Italian invasion of Ethiopia. The issue, fundamentally, was between the determined, unprincipled aggressor and the new forces working for the development of a certain measure of law and order in international relations.

The dictator has won, and the fall of Addis Ababa is all too likely to be followed by surrender at Geneva. But, outside of those capitals which hold their armies leashed to strike as national policy dictates, the reaction at this setback to civilization will be one of profound pessimism.

The Ten Thousand.

Some 10,000 Federal employes either already have been, or are soon to be, dismissed as a result of the dissolution or reorganization of four Government agencies. The Supreme Court decisions finding the NRA and AAA unconstitutional threw many out of work; more are now threatened by belated decisions to reduce the personnel of both the Works Progress and Resettlement Administrtaions.

Representatives of this sizable army have devised a plan for which they are seeking Executive approval. They suggest that qualified employes who have been dismissed without prejudice be permitted to take special, competitive examinations for vacancies in newly established Federal agencies which require Civil Service ratings.

But a "special competitive" examination is a contradiction in itself. There can be little open competition if only selected contestants (i. e., those having held previous employment in the Government) are allowed to enter. A further difficulty in the plan lies in the provision that only "qualified" former employes be eligible for these special examinations. All of them should have been qualified before being first appointed, but since this was evidently not the case, who shall decide which ones are now unqualified?

The plain fact is that not even several thousand hard-luck cases can justify tampering with the fundamental principles of the Civil Service system. The individual must be selected to fit the position, and not the reverse. There have been proposals that the 10,000 be given some preference in the distribution of non-Civil Service jobs, and to this there could be little, if any, objection. Other things being equal, a person with Government experience should be slightly more valuable in another office than one offering nothing but a political indorsement by way of recommendation.

But to ask that a statistician, for example, who once worked in an emergency bureau be given special consideration in a competition for a permanent position over another who never happened to draw a Federal pay check is to strike at the very faindamentals of the Civil Service system.

Rome's Responsibility

It is not easy to grasp the full significance of what is happening in Ethiopia. For the moment attention is centered upon the horror of the anarchy unleashed in Addis Ababa. But this outburst of barbarism merely symbolizes the utter collapse of a feudal empire. Regardless of European repercussions from the Italian conquest, there is an urgent necessity of saving Ethiopia from a relapse to savagery which would threaten social stability in adjacent parts of Africa.

This task falls squarely upon the already burdened shoulders of Mussolini. With relentless force, the Italian army has pushed its mechanized war machine to the Ethiopian capital. But the conquerors find only desolation, unburied corpses and chaos. The Fascist legions set out to capture an empire. Having crushed centralized resistance they are confronted by the tremendous responsibility of pacifying scattered tribes seething with hatred of the Ferangi, or all foreigners. It is now up to Italy not merely to restore a semblance of order throughout Ethiopia, but also to establish some degree of civilization upon a background of poverty, ignorance and political collapse.

When Mussolini set out upon this venture he probably did not anticipate that Ethiopia would crumble to pieces in his hands. His aim was to bring the unconquered realm of Haile Selassie under Italian domination. But the Negus, as well as members of his imperial family, prefer exile to humiliation at the hands of the Fascist dictator. Instead of surrendering, the King of Kings has fled, leaving his country in the wildest disorder, distress and confusion.

Thus Italy appears to have obtained more than she bargained for—at least more responsibility. The war has disrupted the social and economic life of millions of tribesmen. Naturally enough, the uprooted people are filled with hatred for all whites, making little distinction between Italians and those who have actually befriended their country. That sentiment, together with the desire to make Italy's victory a hollow triumph, seems to account for the brutal attacks upon the legations in Addis Ababa.

Moreover, the Ethiopians are inherently warlike. Although they were no match for Marshal Badoglio's airplanes, tanks, artillery and poison gas, thousands of native soldiers have gone bravely to their death without seriously impairing the Ethiopian appetite for combat. Man to man, they still feel themselves as superior to the Italians as when they hurled back the invasion of 1896. At present the natives are leaderless and helpless, but it will be a miracle if their hatred of the conqueror is eradicated by the loss of their capital city.

Before order can be restored the Italians will have to penetrate into far more inaccessible parts of Ethiopia. Roads and living quarters will have to be constructed. A permanent army of occupation must be maintained. All this will be a heavy drain upon the nearly empty Treasury at Rome. Mussolini has visions of converting a large proportion of his soldiers into permanent colonists in Ethiopia. How will they obtain title to the land without accentuating feuds and encouraging guerrilla warfare? How can they cultivate the soil without importing costly modern machinery? How will they survive the rigors of the rainy season, now almost at hand?

Even if the ethics of the invasion are laid aside, it is obvious that the Italian dictator has taken upon himself a tremendous obligation. With no prospect of reaping quick rewards from his conquest, he faces an acute need for large capital investments far beyond Italy's power to make. Wild celebrations in Rome are a natural consequence of emotional intoxication resulting from military victory. But they give no hint of the grave problems still to be met. Those Italians who can see the picture as a whole must feel very sober today, in contemplation of the truly gigantic responsibilities that country has assumed.

Moan In Advance

May's come again and haberdashers, who never miss a hint, are already filling their windows with hot weather wear. Very dapper, too, are the displays—the white shoes, gossamer shirts, jaunty panamas and gay cravats. Yet a pall is cast over the entire lot by the reappearance of one single item. Viewing the linen suit in all its deceitful unworn trimness, one must sorrowfully reflect on the ineffectualness of the world's upward strivings.

They've shattered the atom and they've flown the stratosphere; they've invented mechanical cotton pickers and synthetic gasolines. There are patents pending for nonpierceable armor plate and others for projectiles that will stop at nothing. A television line is being built somewhere around Philadelphia. Ice cubes can at last be removed from ice trays and toy stores sell dolls that wet their diapers. Al Smith has been induced to change from a brown derby to a silk hat. War has so far been avoided in Europe. Marvel upon marvel, yet . . . no one has been able to produce anything better for sweltering men than the same old linen suit.

Kiss-proof lipstick has long been taken for granted by women. Bosom shirts that button up the back are old stuff for men. Lastex, a new rubber compound, will provide unsoggy bathing suits for children this summer. Shorts cause little comment today. No modern building goes up without air conditioning. Nudism rarely makes headlines any more. Beer has been put up in cans for quicker cooling and easier quaffing. But still . . . no one has yet produced anything better for sweltering men than the usual wrinkleable, not to say shrinkable, outfit unthinkable, old linen suit.

Outlook For The Franc.

The financial reaction to the victory of the left-wing parties in the French general elections has been distinctly unfavorable. The decline in the bond market, and the weakening of exchange rates during the week intervening between the preliminary and the final election, show a growing anxiety regarding the outlook for the franc. Yet political leaders from the extreme right to the extreme left were united in their opposition to devaluation. Even the Communists denounced it as a "hypocritical device for making the poor pay."

Declarations of this sort, however, are not reassuring unless they are backed by a program of action that offers protection against forced devaluation or involuntary inflation. As a matter of fact, stable money professions are inconsistent with many policies indorsed by the left-wing groups. Instead of supporting demands for retrenchment and acquiescing in plans for reducing domestic production costs, the parties to the "left" favor higher prices, and restoration of wage and pension cuts. Socialistic demands for government ownership and control of key industries, nationalization of credit and embargoing of capital exports may be successfully resisted. But a Government representing the so-called Popular Front, will undoubtedly be more liberal in spending public money, less inclined to tax the people, and less concerned about budgetary deficits.

In fact, Leon Blum, the Socialist leader, who is mentioned as the most logical successor to Premier Sarraut, asserts that deficits are a result, not a cause of crises and that a return to normal business would automatically solve the fiscal problems of the country. His reasoning has a familiar "New Deal" ring to American ears, but his hopeful theory is not calculated to allay the anxiety of those who see the need for stability and hard work as prerequisites of recovery.

Many economists and financial experts are convinced that devaluation is in any event inevitable, and that it would help to solve the French economic problem. There is a great difference, however, between deliberate stabilization of the franc, reached possibly in connection with international stabilization agreements embracing Great Britain and the United States, and a currency upset, due to lavish spending, which would necessitate resort to inflationary financing expedients. If devaluation or depreciation of the franc were to be forced, the shock to confidence both within and without France would be more severe. And disturbances to trade would be more serious.

For such reasons concern about the probable financial consequences of the election has for the time being overshadowed the effect of the left-wing victory in giving a changed direction to French foreign policies and in putting a check upon domestic Fascist movements. The new government will be compelled to modify its demands in order to retain the support of the moderate radical Socialists, and it will also have to reckon with the Senate if it should move too far to the left.

All that can be said with assurance, therefore, at this time, is that the election has introduced new elements of uncertainty into the financial picture that make the prospect of orderly exchange relationships, and therefore complete international re- prospect of orderly exchange relationships covery, seem more remote than before.

The Rarity of Reading.

Jerome Barry in Today.

Even though statistics show a degree of literacy flattering to our national pride, the fact is that a large percentage of the literate do not know how to read in the modern sense. They examine a printed page letter by letter with great labor and synthesize the symbols into the groups that form a rather small number of English words. Such a process is more accurately described as deciphering than as reading. * * * One in seven of the pupils in our city schools, it is estimated, fails to learn to read with facility, and suffers sufficient psychic disturbance from that failure to make a problem case of him. Children's courts have discovered that the young people who come before them are almost always five years retarded in reading ability.

Two educators studied 1,690 typical American adults whose schooling varied widely, to report that only one-half could read with reasonable ease and understanding most of the material intended for adults. One-third could not engage intelligently in any activity of which reading was a part.

Reading is a far more complex trick than is apparent. * * * Blending visual symbols into sound symbols, sound symbols into words, words into phrases, sentences, and sustained thought-groups, doing all this with smooth rapidity—a swift reader rivals W. C. Fields' cigar-box stunt every time he turns a page of reading matter.

Mr. Winant's Perspective.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
John G. Winant, chairman of the Social Security Board, says:

"It took many years for this young and vigorous country of ours to realize that its frontiers would finally disappear. That a time would come when individual initiative and enterprise would not automatically result in a secured existence, that millions of our fellow citizens would come to economic grief through no fault of their own and that we, as a Government, if we were to survive, must provide those individuals with something more than occasional charity or emergency relief."

Mr. Winant is not a Roosevelt Democrat, nor a La Follette-Norris-Nye Republican. He is not a Socialist nor a Communist. He might properly be called an old-fashioned Republican inasmuch as he has served as Governor of a rock-ribbed Republican State—a State noted always for its conservatism and adherence to the fundamentals—and has been a consistent supporter of the Republican party all through his voting years.

The party doesn't matter, and the fortune of the individual officeholder doesn't matter. It does tremendously matter whether or not we are keeping step with the needs and demands of progressing civilization and are awake to the problems modern complexities throw on us. It is most refreshing to know that all schools of political thought are realizing these responsibilities.

GEORGE L. PAYNE.
Dallas, Tex., April 27.

Sen. Hasting's Decision.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
I am greatly shocked and disappointed to read in The Post that Senator Hastings of Delaware will not be a candidate to succeed himself. Not only will the Republican party lose a very able and outstanding champion but the United States Senate can ill afford to spare so safe and sane man at this critical time.

But for the fact that he comes from such a small State, I do not hesitate to state that he undoubtedly would be seriously considered for the Presidency by his party's spokesmen at the Cleveland convention. Should Senator Dickinson of Iowa, who is without doubt the best bet of any of the several candidates to beat Mr. Roosevelt next November, be nominated as a dark horse at Cleveland, Senator Hastings would be an ideal candidate for Vice President on the Republican ticket.

Six months ago I preferred Representative Hamilton Fish for Vice President with Dickinson, but since Mr. Fish has lined up so strongly for Mr. Borah for President, it lessens my belief that he should be selected for second place on the ticket with Dickinson.

Many people seem to forget that the important thing is not the man who has the best chance to be nominated, but the man who has proven his ability to win office not with money but by his record and his personality. That man is Senator Dickinson.

Example of Penn Relays.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
Franklin Field's relay games mean a great deal for real democracy. The battles for racial good will and tolerance are being won on our American athletic fields.

Colored and white athletes strove to excel, taking and giving in victory and defeat, and only the best sportsmanship prevailed. The fact that Jesse Owens, Eulace Peacock and the Texan relay team were the stellar attractions, and that colored and white boys from all over Dixie and the United States met at the scratch and the tape without the slightest friction shows progress in America.

When can Washington truly become a metropolitan city? Some signs point that way. Our sports, and much of civic enterprise will be worthy of the world-wide reputation for cosmopolitan greatness when some of our provincial barriers pass away.

Readers Protest Second Orchestra.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
The attitude of your readers and the value, in sense, of your editorial last week on the proposed plan of a second symphony orchestra in Washington is certainly a fair one to the management and the musicians who have made the National Symphony Orchestra the fine one it is.

There is reason to believe that a second orchestra is not needed here. First, because we already have an excellent one; second, because contributions from interested people last year were not enough to prevent the orchestra (one orchestra) from operating at a deficit; third, because during the past season the capacity of the house was sold out only two or three times. Furthermore, a second orchestra which would just be formed would lack the precision of performance which our orchestra has and which takes time and much playing together to perfect. The time it would take a new combination of musicians to achieve such performance would certainly take five years at the least, and this would depend largely on the caliber of its conductor and the technic of the musicians generally.

A second orchestra is most unnecessary. It is a "Bunchuk nonsense." If those ambitious citizens like Mr. Oyster who favor a second orchestra would exert themselves, their efforts and their resources for the one orchestra we now have, their action would be one that is rightfully deserved by the National Symphony Orchestra, and it would spare this ugly specter which appears before us now.

ARTHUR COHEN.
Washington, May 1.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
As an active supporter of the National Symphony Orchestra I deplore the proposed plan of Mr. Bunchuk and his associates to organize an opposition group here for the purpose of summer concerts.

Any division of the loyalty of Washington music lovers can result only in the eventual collapse of any successful symphonic effort in the city.

I sincerely trust that the Bunchuk plans will not receive the necessary support so that the loyalty of Washingtonians may be concentrated on their own National Symphony Orchestra to the latter's continued growth and betterment.

DAVID B. KARRICK.
Washington, May 2.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
I am requested by members of the Friday Morning Music Club to express to The Post their appreciation and thanks for the fine editorial of April 30 regarding the National Symphony Orchestra.

We feel the continuance of the orchestral concerts summer and winter is of vital importance to our city. I read with astonishment and regret the news of a proposed new orchestra coming to Washington apparently expecting to profit by the popularity of the National Symphony and using our ideas and methods for their own purposes.

We need the support and interest of every Washingtonian and we cannot stress too seriously the question of loyalty. The names of Roxy, Maj. Bowes and Yasha Bunchuk are associated with projects of musical worth, but they are, as we know, not connected with orchestras of the high standards such as the Boston, Philadelphia, or our own National Symphony with Hans Kindler as conductor.

The Negro Vote.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
The address of Arthur W. Mitchell, the only Negro member of Congress, sets forth in just and temperate terms the political drift and tendency of the colored vote. This address has attracted wide attention and may be called the Negro's declaration of independence. However, its implied reflection on Abraham Lincoln's integrity of purpose in issuing the Emancipation Proclamation will generally be regarded as unnecessary and unfortunate.

The generous attitude of the Republican party toward the Negro ended with the administration of Theodore Roosevelt, 28 years ago. Since then, the "Grand Old Party" has deviated from its ancient doctrine of human rights in quest of material prosperity. It has grown cold and indifferent toward its black ward and beneficiary, as if in the process of weaning him. In the meantime, the Democratic party has been gradually growing, not only less hostile, but more friendly.

Judging the future by the past, the Negro can hope for better things under the continuation of Roosevelt's administration than under any one of the candidates now bidding for the Republican nomination. Indeed, no one of these aspirants makes any appeal to the support or enthusiasms of the Negro vote. The most likely of these aspirants, the present Governor of Kansas, is wholly without known attitude on the race question, as upon other great national issues. Franklin D. Roosevelt, the Negro knows; William E. Borah, he knows; but Alfred Landon he knows not.

Better Off Voteless?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
It is reported in the local press that Senator Capper and Representative Norton will urge the national conventions of their respective parties to indorse the right of suffrage for the people of the District of Columbia and give to them the right to elect Representatives to Congress.

No greater disservice could be rendered this District, or one that would be attended ultimately with more unfortunate consequences. With all its defects, and they are many, we probably have the best municipal government in the United States.

Congress and the District Committees thereof feel a personal interest and responsibility for District affairs and government. If the District should be represented in Congress they would no longer feel the same interest and responsibility, and would be only too glad to shift it upon our Representatives.

Government employes, who constitute a large part of the population, retain the right to vote in the States from whence they came, and many of them live across the line in Virginia and Maryland and vote in those States. The wealthy and better class of the people would probably be out of the city at election time, or if here would, like their kind in the States, not take the trouble to vote.

Suffrage, if granted, will be without limit, excepting criminals, minors and mental defectives. There are probably 165,000 Negroes in the District, which number would be greatly augmented from Virginia and Maryland if suffrage is given. The merest political tyro knows that the result would be formation of a coalition among a certain class of whites and Negroes, who would absolutely control the elections.

The results would be disastrous socially and politically to the District and would surely not contribute anything to the peace and good order of this community. The foregoing are but a few of the hundreds of reasons that mght be given in opposition to this proposal.

Washington is much better off voteless, and this unwise proposal should be opposed by all the decent elements of the city, and especially by all those who have any substantial material interests here.

The Post Impressionist

They Won't Grow Young!

Post Office, Tuesday.

In all the hurry and worry of modern city existence, urban folk are apt to forget those small towns where, far from rushing, life still moves decorously and with grace, and where—though doubtless the dwellers have their troubles—those troubles trouble in a temperate tempo. Amid all the strain of 1936, in metropolis and capital, we lose realization of the delectable fact that there still exist American havens which have never lost the quiet dignity of happier days.

Perhaps it is as well! If this mental lapse were lacking the decorous towns, the happier havens—now rare enough—might soon cease altogether. For nostalgia would become more than ever the urban plague: our present cities might be emptied by harried inhabitants speeding to the pleasant places—and, by settling in them, turning them into the wretched sort of communities which the refugees were seeking to forsake.

Nevertheless, there is a tonic beneficial to such travelers as visit briefly the older and scarcely changing scenes, without disturbing them. There is renewal.

If you want to try it this week, we seriously advise that you go to Dover, Del., next Saturday.

The Post-Impressionist has been there only once, but he has never forgotten it.

He was a bumptious boy reporter and—having himself been born in a lovely old town—thought that he was scornful of any settlement of less than 500,000 souls. He soon felt differently about Dover.

His assignment was the recording of a murder trial that resulted from a crime proper to the peasants of whom Zola wrote so frequently, and sometimes de Maupassant. The Post-Impressionist modestly proposed to write of it as de Maupassant might have written, or Zola. Yet the murder had occurred far from Dover, and Dover soon had your columnist writing of the trial in a thorough-going imitation of George W. Cable.

Essentially, Dover hasn't changed since the times when "Woodburn" was a new house on the King's highway—hasn't changed any more than the fine colonial front of "Woodburn" itself, behind which Alfred Henry Townsend placed so many episodes of "The Entailed Hat."

Patty Cannon's raid could happen there today. You don't have to close your eyes to seem to see old Chancellor Killen crossing the Green to open court in his judicial robes, flanked by his guard of tipstaves.

Dover is verdant and umbrageous. Those are just the words: the latter because Dover, where not late seventeenth century, is eighteenth, like so many of its stanchly standing buildings—the former because Dover's old age is a green old age.

Now, as when "The Universal Gazeteer" said so, "on the East side of the Parade is an elegant State House (1722) built of brick (which) gives an air of grandure to the town." Through these slumbering streets, from his nearby home, there clattered toward Philadelphia, on the night of July 3rd, 1776, Caesar Rodney, eluding his Delaiah in order to make the adoption of the Declaration unanimous. Here, you feel, still live that belle of the Revolution, Mistress Mary Vining—Richard Bassett, who "worked for the location of the National Capital on the Potomac instead of the Delaware"—Henry Comegys, regent of Mount Vernon—Clayton of the Bulwer-Clayton Treaty—and, not least of all, Master Bartell, Official Powderer-of-Wigs to the Assembly.

Here, too, as in not distant New Castle—for which Stuyvesant contended with the Swedes and in fittingly which Max Adler wrote "Out of the Hurlyburly"—you'll expect to find all the spoils of Poynton: Peale portraits, silver by the Delaware silversmiths, gowns worn at the first Georgian court, Chelsea china.

Well, you won't be disappointed.

But, unless you have friends in Dover, or are kin to the people that have lived there—if not since Penn had the place laid out, then since the inhabitants burned George III in effigy—you may see these things on only one day of each year. And this year that day is May 9.

Much as Georgetown's old houses and Alexandria's are opened to the public once annually, so—as Mrs. Stanley Worden, corresponding secretary, tells us—the Dover Garden Club arranged that Dover's old houses shall be open. It's like Aeneas' last sight of Troy—without, thank Heaven, the flames!

After all, for these few remaining retreats from the modern world, the flame most to be dreaded is that of modern "flaming youth": the perverted passion to modernize them. But they resist, these old places, patiently, successfully. Patiently because they have the tolerance of age. Successfully because they have eternal youth—because, in their age, they are still the America that was so young and so lovely a century and two centuries ago.

They haven't, you see, ever grown up.

And here's hoping that they never will!

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

Law Enforcement, U. S. A. Style.

Willie the Wasp robs an orphan asylum. Court psychiatrist steps out of cribbage game to give him the o. o. Finds Willie never had an Oxford education, often looks at self in mirror while shaving (narcissic complex), and at times has trouble resisting impulses to do wrong. Charges changed to smoking in theater and defendant placed on probation with orders to report to probation offier by telephone and hang up if he gets no answer.

II.

Willie the Wasp steals a touring car and flees through crowded street before being caught. Psychiatrists make a new examination. Find he likes automobiles but hates the initial expense due to bumping head against a wash boiler when in high school. Charge changed to failure to salute flag. Defendant placed on probation and requested to write a letter every six months telling the State how he is behaving.

III.

Willie, now pretty well convinced anything goes, kicks in music store window and rolls a piano down middle of Main street. Psychiatrist, called to bat for third time in one inning, discovers Willie was denied music lessons as a youth, didn't get enough cream in his coffee during the formative years and likes to do what he likes to do. Charge changed to expectorating in a public building. Placed on probation with a plea from the probation officer to remember that he is on probation.

IV.

Willie steals a bass viol from a member of a symphony orchestra while the musician is playing it. Psychiatrist says the lad fell out of an apple tree at the tender age of 17 years, wants his own way and has trouble in concentrating when listening to something he doesn't want to listen to. Court gives him indeterminate sentence in reformatory. Reformatory keeps him overnight or until parole papers can be prepared by parole board.

V.

Willie shoots a policeman, steals a hook and ladder and robs a bank all on one afternoon. Psychiatrist cites previous reports and adds that consideration should be given to the fact the policeman was pretty sick anyhow, the hook and ladder wasn't a new one and the bank had lots of money. Charge changed to parking beside a hydrant. Willie is put on probation for violating probation.

VI.

Brutal assault is traced to Willie, who admits all and is posed for newspaper photographers by considerate detectives who give him a cigarette and ask him if he wants a match. Lawyer announces defense will be irresponsibility and shows previous reports of psychiatrists to prove it.

VII.

Willie is signed to write a life story for tabloid newspapers. Awah-h! Awah-h-h!

Leopold Stokowski has bought a farm and made the ice house into a guest house. This may refute the old saying that guests are like fish: after three days they begin to smell.

Pan-American Court Proposed by Panama

Panama, May 4 (AP).—The Republic of Panama today proposed that the creation of a permanent court of Pan-American justice be considered in the forthcoming Pan-American conference at Buenos Aires.

The government suggested that, no matter what the conference might do, it could not be considered complete if there did not imerge "a strictly American tribunal which, possessing special knowledge of the nature of our country and their different problems, also possesses all the antecedent and background indispensable for judging with the necessary precision conflicts which may arise among the different states of the continent."

Plumbers to Meet.

Italy And Germany

Rumors Of Secret Understanding Between Two Dictatorships Discounted Despite Apparent Similarity Of Aims In Europe.

By Andre Vulliet.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris,

WITH ITALY and Germany so much in the headlines, and rumors persistently circulated as to the possibility of a secret agreement eventually binding Hitler and Mussolini, it is of interest to examine the factors tending to bring a rapprochement between the two dictators, and those tending to cause their divorce. While there appears to be ground for a certain amount of co-opertaion between the two countries, it seems that this can only be a day-to-day collaboration. The two dictatorships' ultimate views and interests are really widely divergent and likely to tear them apart.

The affinities which tend to bring Italy and Germany together are certain similarities in their political development, in their economic stuation, in their social needs. This parallelism, however, must confront the fact that Nazism and Fascism are two rising forces bound to clash sooner or later when fighting it out on the same chess board—Central Europe.

Both Nations Are Still Immature.

IN THE LIGHT of history, both Germany and Italy are of the same age. Compared to those of France and Great Britain, their political ideals and maturity are primitive. While the latter two countries reached nationhood centuries ago, Italy and Germany did not start on their way to unity until 1848 and did not attain it until 1870.

In the development of most great powers we can distinguish three phases: nationalism, imperialism and stabilization. Imperialism is only overflowing nationalism. This was true at least of France and Great Britain, now resting on their past glory. In a way, the French colonial imperialism of the end of last century was merely a resurgence of that French nationalism which had received a blow from the Germans in 1870.

Assuming this is a normal development, it seems natural that Germany and Italy, being both heated by nationalistic fever, should now in turn be imperialistic. In contrast of Great Britain and France, rich and conservative, they both have claims to make, and secretly wish to upset the apple-cart of those who have too much. The fact that this exalted nationalism is upheld in both cases by a high birthrate is just one more point these two nations have in common.

Neither Was Strong Enough To Survive War.

Another feature which may also be regarded as likely to draw the Germans and Italian peoples together is that they are both going through the same sort of social and political revolution. It appears that they were not socially strong enough for democracy. To survive the economic duress and social troubles which followed the World War, Italy gave up the democratic system in 1922 and Germany followed suit 10 years later after the republican regime had proved a failure with the German people.

To a certain extent, this inability to live under a democratic rule must be regarded as the basis of Germany's and Italy's scornful attitude toward the League of Nations, as the very spirit and methods of this institution are democratic.

This particular reaction toward political principles which are held essential by other nations, be it on a national or an international plan, is another factor tending to make Nazis and Fascists line up together. And all the more so because fascism and Nazism are regarded with contempt in democratic countries. The normal reaction is to stand up together against the mutual criticisms.

Then, last among their common grudges there appears to be a certain similarity in the Italian and German situation as resulting from the World War. Both countries found themselves in sorry financial plight, with social trpubles, mounting unemployment and an exceedingly small capital surplus on which to live. Both found—and still find—the peace treaties unjust, Germany because they took away, Italy because they did not give enough.

Italy Bargaining, Germany Sincere In Aims.

THERE IS a fundamental difference, however, between Italy and Germany.

The German fight against the treaties is a basic and everlasting principle of German policy. It cannot change, because it is based on actual losses suffered from the war and the proud necessity of rebuilding a greater German Empire. The Italian stand for revisionism is more tactical. It is designed to annoy the French and stand in the way of their political satellites in Central Europe, namely, the Little Entente states. It did not and does not correspond to any real aspiration of the Italian people. It is a sort of hand-to-mouth policy embarked upon for its bargain value.

This bargain value may change every day, and it probably will in the near future. Italy has no real claim in Europe, as there is no unredeemed Italian land outside Italian territory. But there are millions of German-speaking people outside the German borders and more than 200,000 of them in the Italian Tyrol.

The dream of a greater Germany embraces Austria, the German population of Czechoslovakia and Hungary. Whether this would only be the beginning of further expansion toward Central and Southeastern Europe is not sure, but it is possible. Pan-Germanism is certain, however, to grow at the expense of whatever influence Italy is trying to develop in Central Europe.

It is on this ground that any durable entente between the Third Reich and Fascist Italy seems doomed to failure.

For centuries, Italy's traditional enemy has been the House of Austria, because of its preponderant influence in Central Europe. The realization of the German dream — the Drang nach Osten — would revive for Italy the same peril, with the only difference that Germany would play the part played before the war by Austria. The pole of Germanic attraction would be Berlin instead of Vienna.

Moreover, there is little doubt that, from an economic standpoint, Germany has more appeal to the Central European countries than Italy, as her large industrial surplus and agricultural needs are a perfect complement for their agricultural economy. In the light of economics and racial elements the chances of German expansion in Central Europe thus appears far greater than those of Italy. And all the more so if France and Soviet Russia are strong, as the German drive—political or otherwise—would then be directed southward.

Duce Cool To Nazis, Knowing Their Appetites.

IT SEEMS that Germany's present attitude in Europe is perfectly consistent with her needs and her future aims. She is gambling for a long shot. On the contrary, Italy's bargain policy may bring her temporarily in the German camp. But in the long run she will find that her German neighbor wants the lion's share.

This conflict between Italy's present bargaining needs and her future needs no doubt accounts for Mussolini's persistent unwillingness to line up definitely with anybody, be it France, Germany or the League of Nations. The chances are that he may keep on along the same line for some time to come, whatever the rumors about a rapprochement with the German dictator. While he and Chancellor Hitler may think the same way about politics and democracy, their aims are very different.

Compromise Is Offered For Ship Subsidy Bill

A compromise ship subsidy bill was introduced yesterday by Senator Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, in an effort to break the long deadlock over such legislation. The new measure eliminates a former provision permitting Government purchase of existing privately-owned steamship lines, but would allow Government construction of new ships for hire to private operators. Prospects for a solution of the long controversy, however, appeared little brighter.

4 WPA Workers Killed In Dynamite Explosion

Greenfield, Mo., May 4 (AP).—Four WPA workers were killed by a dynamite explosion today on a highway project 4½ miles north of here. The dead are Vernie Yost, 27; Orville Fleeman, 30; Loal Rook, 28, and Russell Daugherty, 23. The men had 16 sticks of dynamite and apparently all of it exploded. Rook was powder man for the crew of four, which was working ahead of the main crew. The cause of the explosion was not determined.

Morley Expert On Economics, Foreign Affairs

Was a Rhodes Scholar; Wrote Noted Treatise on Geneva League.

Felix Morley, editor of The Washington Post, who last night received the Pulitzer award for distinguished newspaper editorials, was born January 6, 1894, at Haverford College, Pa., where his father, Dr. Frank Morley, was professor of mathematics. The family moved to Baltimore in 1900, when Dr. Morley became head of the mathematics department at the Johns Hopkins University.

Morley was graduated at the Friends School, Baltimore, in 1911 and at Haverford College in the class of 1915. At college he was interested in literary pursuits and was an editor of the college magazine as well as president of the student association. In 1915 he won the Robert Browning Memorial verse award in a contest open to undergraduates of Pennsylvania colleges.

Joins Ambulance Unit.

Three days after graduation at Haverford, Morley sailed for Europe with a classmate and joined an ambulance unit of the British Red Cross. He served with this unit in Northern France and Belgium for nearly a year, returning to the United States to start his newspaper career as a reporter on the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Early in 1917 he joined the staff of the United Press in Philadelphia and shortly thereafter was transferred to its Washington bureau. When the United States entered the war, Morley enlisted in the first R. O. T. C. at Fort Myer and was later appointed to the staff of the Wartime Emergency Employment Service of the Department of Labor. After the armistice he was for nearly a year a Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia North American.

In the fall of 1919 Morley sailed for England to take up a Rhodes Scholarship, awarded from Maryland in 1916 but deferred because of the war. He received the B. A. degree from the Honor School of Modern History at Oxford in 1921 but remained in Europe a third year, having been appointed to the Hutchinson Research Fellowship at the London School of Economics and Political Science. His research subject was "Unemployment Relief in Great Britain" and his book under that title, completed after his return to the United States, received second prize in the Hart Schaffner and Marx economic essay competition for 1924.

Sent to Far East.

In August, 1922, Morley joined the editorial staff of the Baltimore Sun, remaining with that paper for six years. He was sent to the Far East by the Sun in 1925 and on his return, after a six-month sojourn in Japan, China and the Philippines, published a book, entitled "Our Far Eastern Assignment," largely an expansion of articles written for that paper.

In 1928 Morley was awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship to make a study of the organization and constitutional development of the League of Nations. During his stay at Geneva he also served as correspondent for the Baltimore Sun, resigning this connection in 1930 in order to complete the Geneva study. Following his resignation from the Baltimore Sun he organized and directed the Geneva office of the League of Nations Association of the United States.

In 1931 Morley returned from Geneva to join the staff of the Brookings Institution in Washington and there completed his book on "The Society of Nations," published by the Brookings Institution in 1932. Sir Eric Drummond, the first Secretary General of the League, in a foreword which he wrote for this volume, called it "a valuable and permanent contribution" to literature on the League of Nations. The book, which is purely expository in nature, is used as a textbook in a number of American universities and colleges.

Becomes Post Editor.

In the fall of 1933 Eugene Meyer, who had bought The Washington Post a few months previously, asked Morley to assume charge of the editorial page of the paper. Morley became editor of The Post on December 18, 1933.

He is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations, of the Federal Advisory Council of the United States Employment Service, of Phi Beta Kappa, and a fellow of the Royal Economic Society of Great Britain.

Morley was married in Washington, on December 8, 1917, to Isabel Middleton, daughter of Jefferson Middleton, who for many years was connected with the United States Geological Survey. Mr. and Mrs. Morley have four children, Lorna Janet, 13; Christina Bird, 11; Anthony Jefferson, 6; and Felix Woodbridge, 3. The three older children are students at the Friends School in Washington.

Morley has two brothers, Christopher Morley, the well-known author, and Frank V. Morley, a member of the publishing house of Faber & Faber in London, England.

Edward VIII to Receive Envoys' Papers Today

London, May 4 (AP).—Ambassador Robert W. Bingham of the United States and other members of the diplomatic corps will present their credentials to King Edward in Buckingham Palace tomorrow.

The ceremony is occasioned by the accession of the new sovereign, a letter of credence being from the head of one-state to another.

In contrast with May 23, 1933, when Bingham rode in an open carriage behind the King's horses to present his credentials to the late King George, he and the rest of the diplomats will go to the palace in private automobiles.

Critics Snubbed Again by Choice Of Prize Drama

Pulitzer Committee Names 'Idiot's Delight' Over Anderson Drama.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 4.—The Pulitzer prize committee differed with New York drama critics again tonight by preferring Robert E. Sherwood's "Idiot's Delight" to Maxwell Anderson's "Winterset."

The Sherwood antiwar play, now running with a New York Theater Guild cast headed by Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt, was selected by the committee to receive its 1936 prize for the best drama by an American author presented during the current season.

The drama critics, who in past years have disagreed with the Pulitzer prize awards and after last year's announcement decided to do their own picking, previously had announced the Anderson play as their choice.

Winning Play Is Attack on War

By the United Press.

"Idiot's Delight," generally adjudged the best of a half-dozen by Sherwood, former motion-picture critic and magazine editor, is a temperate, but none the less effective castigation of war, doubly impressive because it combines its antiwar features with time-tried entertainment values which make it considerably more than a one-sided diatribe.

Serwood has written several successful plays among them being "The Road to Rome," "The Petrified Forest," "The Queen's Husband" and "Reunion in Vienna."

"Honey in the Horn," the prize winning novel, is the first published by Harold L. Davis. It was the 1935 winner of the biennial Harper Prize novel award of $10,000. Critics hailed the work as tapping an unused source of American life, dealing with pioneers in the Pacific northwest. The writing is robust and realistic. The novel was a best seller for many months after its publication.

Robert P. Tristram Coffin, whose "Strange Holiness' won the poetry prize, is a member of the faculty of Wells College, Aurora, N. Y. His poetry was recognized last May when the ninth annual poetry week committee selected him as the outstanding poet of the Nation in 1935. He boasts that he is the only poet to have verse published simultaneously in the Ladies Home Journal and the Nation.

Posthumous Award.

Will Barber, awarded the prize for foreign correspondence posthumously, fell victim to the rigorous Ethiopian climate. Despite the fact that he was gravely ill, he continued to send dispatches to the Chicago Tribune. On October 3, 1935, he dictated his last story on his death bed. It was an account of Emperor Haile Selassie's mobilization order.

In awarding first honorable mention for distinguished foreign correspondence to Webb Miller, of the United Press, the Pulitzer committee took cognizance of his work with the Italian army. A veteran war correspondent, Miller straddled a sand-bag parapet and wrote a story of the start of the Italian advance toward Aduwa, the city where Ethiopians massacred the Italians in the last century. Miller continued with the Italian army until the issue of the war was no longer in doubt.

Lauren D. Lyman's prize for reporting was won on the strength of a single story. He "scooped" every other New York newspaper on the self-imposed exile of the Lindberghs when they fled this country to establish residence abroad and seek safety for their second son.

Andrew G. McLaughlin, who wrote "The Constitutional History of the United States," history prize winner, is a former history professor of the University of Chicago. He has written nine other books on American history and Government, including "Foundations of American Constitutionalism" published in 1933. He lives in Chicago and is 75 years old.

Ralph Barton Perry, who wrote "The Thought and Character of William James," prize winning biography, is a professor of philosophy at Harvard University. He is the author of 14 other works, including three on William James. His "A Defense of Philosophy" was published in 1931. Perry is 60.

Rattlesnake Bite Fatal To Man in Faith Test

Bartow, Fla., May 4 (AP).—Alfred Weaver, 35-year-old itinerant bitten by a rattlesnake during a "faith" demonstration at a revival service here last night, died today, refusing medical treatment.

He had declined to permit physicians to aid him, even after the hand on which he was bitten turned purple and his arm was swollen to the shoulder.

During a revival meeting conducted by George Hensley, who frequently has handled reptiles in the course of his own demonstrations, Weaver picked the snake from a box. It lashed out and struck him twice.

Pants Thief

Capital Prowler Believed Held in Baltimore.

Washington's much sought after pants burglar was believed captured yesterday when a Negro was arrested in Baltimore, Md. A watch found in his possession answers the description of one stolen here in December.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, said a warrant will be sent to Baltimore to return the man here.

Thompson said more than 20 pairs of pants have been stolen from bedrooms in the Northeast and Southeast sections of the city within the last six months. He said the thief only took jewelry and money from the pockets and discarded the trousers nearby.

The man, Leroy Mason, also will be questioned in connection with the theft of $10,000 worth of silverware from the home of Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, 2107 Wyoming avenue northwest, several weeks ago.

Col. John P. Ryan Dies in California

The War Department was notified yesterday of the death of Col. John P. Ryan, 69, retired, former Cavalry officer at Fort Myer, Va., at Letterman General Hospital, San Francisco, Calif., on Sunday.

A graduate of the United States Military Academy in 1884, he served wit hthe Sixth Cavalry at Fort Myer from 189 6 to 1898. Throughout the Spanish-American War he fought with Troop H of the Sixth Cavalry in Puerto Rico.

From August, 1912, to June, 1913, Col. Ryan was a student at the Army War Colege here. He was retired for disability in line of duty in February, 1914, but was returned to active duty when the United States entered the war.

5 Prisoners Fell Guard And Flee Carolina Camp

Kenansville, N. C., May 4 (AP).—Five long-term prisoners overpowered a guard today and escaped from the State prison camp here. Sam Coley, the guard, was thrown to the ground and disarmed, but was not injured. He said two prisoners seized him as he stepped from a truck which had stopped alongside a work gang.

Three of those escaping were Kenneth Hughes, serving 30 years for bank robbery; Horace Nichols, also serving 30 years, and Leo Pollard, under sentence of 15 years. The identies of the other two were not immediately determined. The prisoners took a shotgun and a pistol from the guard. Posses put bloodhounds on the trail.

Fine Feathers

Birds, like animals, change their coats to correspond with seasonal changes, feather counters of the Smithsonian Institute have discovered.

Announcement was made yesterday by Dr. Alexander Wetmore, assistant secretary of the institute. He said the difference was determined by actually counting feathers of birds of the same species at different seasons of the year.

There is a steady decline in the number of feathers from early spring until the end of the summer, he said. The bird then undergoes a so-called "post-nuptial molt," and afterwards receives most of its feathers, according to Westmore.

Court Again Delays Guffey Bill Ruling

By the Associated Press.

Another opinion session failed to produce a Supreme Court ruling yesterday on constitutionality of the Guffey coal act.

The decision was postponed for at least two weeks. By that time the act will have been under consideration of the court 67 days, a record for any major piece of New Deal legislation.

The court adjourned until May 18 after meeting briefly to announce whether it would review 18 controversies appealed from lower courts. Not a single decision was handed down.

Three more sessions for the announcement of decisions will be held before the court adjourns for the summer of June 1.

Father Who Killed Children Suicide

Pumphrey was committed to Howard Hall, criminally insane section of the hospital, in 1930 after he shot and killed his two children, Doris, 6, and James, 4, in their home in the 1200 block B street southeast.

His body was found by an attendant, hanging from a shelf in the closet. A bed sheet had been fashioned into a noose.

U. S. Can Cure Economic Ills, Wallace Says

Can Win Under Constitution if People Are Told Truth, Secretary Avers.

By the Associated Press.

Lincoln, Neb., May 4.—Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace said today he was convinced the "economic dilemma can be met in an American way and under the Constitution, providing the truth is told to the people."

He told a crowd of University of Nebraska students and professors that "this very thing will be a challenge to every one in the next ten years or so."

"There is no easy way out," he added. "It may come to the stage where the world will be under the domination of national states, as in some foreign countries already, but this isn't the American doctrine, and I hope it never does become the American doctrine."

The address climaxed a busy day for the Secretary, starting with conferences with soil conservation committees from six States and followed by his principal talk of the day at a public mass meeting of farmers.

In this address, Wallace expressed the fear farmers would "be sold down the river again" if they accepted the "high tariff idea as a cure-all for agriculture."

He said the "outlook for agriculture is bright but its continuance depends upon a four-point program for agricultural improvement" which he outlined as follows:

"Maintaining the present healthy supply situation, reopening further the channels of world trade, conserving the fertility of the farm plant and developing the latent home market."

Three principal revisions in the soil conservation program to meet what Wallace said were "demands of hundreds of farmers" were announced by him and his conference with committee members from Minnesota, Missouri, South Dakota, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska.

"No longer will farmers be forbidden to use spring grains as soil conservers," Wallace said, "providing they either pasture off the grains or plow them under by June 15 of this year and follow them up with legumes by next September 1.

"Summer fallowing will permit the farmers to work a tract of land, but raise no crop on it, and thus help conserve the soil.

"Another practice to be allowed under the revisions is clean cultivation of chlorate treatment for eradication of perennial noxious weeds, such as bind weed, when approved by the county committees at the start of the season."

Church Merger Voted at Parley Of Methodists

Conference Approves Plan for Largest Protestant Group in Nation.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, May 4.—The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church was committed tonight to a program of unification with other Methodist branches to form the world's largest Protestant body—a Methodist Church having 8,000,000 in 42 countries.

Conference delegates voted 470 to 83 to approve the program of union with the Methodist Episcopal Church South and the Methodist Protestant Church after their leaders visioned in pleas for the merger the possible union of all Protestant churches into a single denomination.

The unification proposal goes now to the annual conferences of the Southern church and the Methodist Protestant Church, with final ratification possible in 1938 at the general conference of the Southern church. The Methodist Protestant General Conference convenes May 20 at High Point, N. C.

Initial Step.

The vote today was an initial step toward healing two great splits in the Methodist Church—the separation of the Methodist Protestant Church in 1821 over the question of lay representation, and the division between the Northern and Southern churches in 1844 because of a dispute over slave ownership.

Liberal leaders led a bitter fight over provisions for dividing the united church into six jurisdictions, with Negro churches segregated in a separate jurisdiction. They declared the provision was "racial discrimination of the ugliest kind."

Bishop William F. McDowell, of Washington, dean of Methodist bishops who 12 years ago presented a plan of unfication which passed both the Northern and Southern general conferences and failed by only a few votes of winning final ratification, offered the program of union to the delegates today.

Joins in Plea.

"Let me see this approved from the other side if it is denied me here," he pleaded. "Do not hesitate to believe that He desires union of this church with all churches which bear His name, this (proposal) is not the end of union. . . ."

Dr. E. Guy Cutshall, of Lincoln, Nebr., chancellor of Nebraska Wesleyan University, joined Bishop McDowell in a plea for unification of all Protestant churches.

'It is not a mere matter of church union," he said. "Al churches must organize into one body to meet the encroachments of the pagan states. This is but our first step."

Thirty-three of the 52 Negro delegates to the conference protested against division of the United Methodist Church into five geographical jurisdictions and a sixth for Negro churches.

Concert to BeGiven By Rubinstein Club

Under the direction of Claude Robeson, the Rubinstein Club will give its second concert of the season tonight in the ballroom of the Willard Hotel. The guest soloist will be Albert Mahler, a young American tenor, who has won distinction as soloist with the Philadelphai Orchestra and other major organizations.

The choral numbers will include "Our Greeting" (Herndon Morsell), "Music of the Spheres" (Rubinstein), "Triumph of the Dance" (Karl Holer), "The Cradles" (Faure), "Dream Hours" (Gulesian), "Widmung," "Warum" and "Gyspy Life" (Schumann), "On Wake's Shore" (H. P. Hopkins). Adele Robinson Bush will be the accompanist.

Mahler will sing the following numbers: "O del mio amato ben" (Donaudy), "Die Nebensonnen" (Shubert), "Immer leiser wird mein Schlummer" (Brahms), "Zueignung" (Strauss), "O Paradiso" (eyerbeer), "A Spirit Flower" (Campbell-Tipton), "Do Not Go, My Love" ((Hageman), "Blue are her Eyes" (Watts); and "Hills" (La Forge).

Virgin Island Bill Passed by Senate

Virgn Islands are about to be given a constitution of their own, with local legislature, a bill of rights and all the necessary parts that make a constitutional government.

A bill to set up this permanent government was passed unanimously yesterday by the Senate, and now goes to the House. It was introduced by Senator Ernest Gibson (Republican), of Vermont.

The bil lprovides for continued Presidential appointment of the island governor, but a legislature, composed of 16 members, 9 from the Island of St. Thomas and 7 from St. Croix and St. John, is established. A judge and a district attorney also would be appointed by the President.

The island governor is given power to veto measures passed by the legislature and also is permitted to veto single items in appropriation bills—a power denied the President of the United States.

The legislature may make laws on most local affairs, but it may not incur bonded indebtedness.

National Restaurant Week Proclaimed for District

By proclamation, this week is National Restaurant Week in Washington. Melvin C. Hazen, District of Columbia Commissioner, is shown here presenting Julius Lulley, president of the Washington Restaurant Association, with the official proclamation. Others, left to right, are Edward D. Shaw, secretary of the local association; A. H. Bacas, chairman of the National Restaurant Week Washington committee; Miss M. Grissett and Burt Lopatin, members of the local committee, and Robert J. Wilson, field representative of the nation organization.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

Government workers, in the poll on the five-day week being conducted by the American Federation of Government Employes, are voting 77 per cent in favor of some form of five-day week.

BAKER.

They are also voting 82 per cent in favor of retention of their present hours, or reducing them. Only 18 per cent are willing to take a five-day week if it means longer hours.

The vote is being taken as a means of determining just what sentiment exists in favor of a five-day week and what objectives should be sought in attaining it. As was expected, the largest group favors a five-day week brought about by the simple expedient of dropping the half-day Saturday. This group comes to nearly 40 per cent of the total.

A smaller group, about 19 per cent, favors the five-day week with the hours now in effect—that is, lengthening the hours the first four days of the week to eight, to take up the time now worked Saturday morning. The argument of this group is that it will not be difficult to obtain a five-day week if hours are not reduced, and that the five day week is sufficiently desirable to be acceptable without any reduction of hours.

On the other hand, proponents of hour reduction argue that there is danger in extending hours, even though the total working time is not increased, for they feel that an eight-hour day might be made permanent, and then, as an afterthought, the Saturday half-day might be put back in some economy drive.

Practically 18 per cent of the vote to date would be willing to accept a 40-hour week if they could get five days, but the general tendencies—for the five-day week and against longer hours—are quite overwhelming.

The poll will be continued several weeks, it is expected, although it is believed that the present tabulation gives a fair perspective of the probable outcome.

Objections to longer hours most frequently cited are the danger of eyestrain and the apprehension that longer hours would interfere with outside activities, such as school courses, etc. The latter objection will no doubt be met by changes in the time of school classes, since heads of Washington colleges and schools have shown readiness to make changes if necessary.

Charles A Jones, general manager, Home Owners Loan Corporation, threw out the first ball yesterday afternoon when the HOLC nine opened its season, meeting WPA on the North Ellipse.

College Night Planned.

A. G. Patterson, Federal Communications Commission, president of the Alabama society, invites all Alabamans in Government service to attend the college night dance at the Willard Hotel May 16. Booths with placards and pennants will be arranged for each Alabama college. Patterson requests alumni to register at their respective booths on arrival. Alabama girls attending college in Washington will be special guests of the society.

National Week Observed Here By Restaurants

The District commissioners have issued a proclamation in connection with the restaurateurs' program aimed to impress the Nation at large with the service performed to a hungry populace.

The commissioners' proclamation reads, in part:

"Whereas, the restaurant industry is among the leading lines of retail trade in Washington, and

"Whereas, the industry is one of the foremost employers of labor, devoting a larger percentage of its gross income to payroll than any other retail trade, and

"Whereas, restaurants are important sustaining forces of agriculture and many food processing and manufacturing industries and as such have become prime factors in the economic as well as physical well-being of this city, and is president.

"Whereas, the importance of scientifically-prepared food and well-balanced meals is becoming increasingly recognized in the preservation of health, and

"Whereas, the leadership in this vital movement has been taken by the restaurateurs of the Nation, and the industry in the District of Columbia has contributed to its general high standing, therefore,

"Be it resolved that Washington join in the observance of National Restaurant Week from May 4 to 10, and that during that period recognition be given to restaurants for their contribution to improved sanitation and scientific preparation of food in the public interest."

Julius Lalley is president of the Washington Restaurant Association and Evan Sholl is chairman of the program committee in charge of this week's observance. Past presidents are Bert L. Olmsted and Hubert H. Keller.

Retail Advertising Gains 4-6 Per Cent

Power Linesman Is Killed by Wire

Baltimore, May 4 (AP).—Ira E. Talbott, power company linesman, pulled Harry Lewis, 41, fellow workman, free of a live wire on a pole today, but when help arrived Lewis was dead.

Efforts to revive him failed. The two linesmen had been sent to the pole to extinguish a fire near the top. It was believed the live wire which started the blaze hit Lewis in the face.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

French Bluing Gives Graying Hair Bright, Silvery Appearance.

By Mignon.

The Mignon who writes this column does not sell, indorse or manufacture any cosmetics.

Posed by Irene Bennett.

THERE ISN'T anything more unpleasant to see on a woman who would otherwise be good looking, than gray hair that has turned yellow. Any woman with gray hair should have pride enough to use a French bluing when necessary, to keep it a lovely silver white.

When gray hair turns yellow, it may be from several causes, but the one that never fails is too much heat. If you curl your hair with an iron, the iron should not be too hot. Sometimes the summer sun will give gray hair this tint of yellow.

So many people write and ask: "What can I do to my hair, as it is turning gray and is very ugly?" The answer is, wash it once a week, not only keep it clean and free from oil, but after it is thoroughly rinsed and and soap all out of it blue it with a French bluing.

The way to do this is to take a pitcher—I prefer a granite one with a wide open top—fill it with very warm water and into this drop a few drops of the French bluing. Stir this thoroughly. To test it and see whether or not it is going to make your hair too blue, take a small white towel and dip the corners in the bluing one at a time. If the towel is very, very faintly lavender, it is just the right strength. If the towel is purple don't put the liquid on your hair. Dilute it until you get it just the right strength. Once you get the trick it is as easy as falling off a log. If the first time you get it a little too blue, rinse the hair with more hot water. Your hair will have a better gloss if you never use cold water for a rinse.

I can tell you of a good French bluing, if you are interested.

If you want to know where you can purchase any article mentioned in this column phone The Washington Post, National 4205. Please do not write unless you live outside the city, in which case inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Breast Milk Best for Babies.

Whenever we wander far afield from Nature's way of doing things, we are likely to encounter difficulties. Mammals, including the human species, provide milk for their young and there is no other food—no matter how skillfully compounded—that is as efficient. Nevertheless, there is an apparently increasing movement to minimize the importance of breast feeding and to emphasize the perfection of artificial food mixtures.

Cautions for Mothers.

Every woman approaching motherhood should be instructed in the importance of breast feeding and the precautions demanded for the production of good milk. Improper dress, constricting brassieres, and all types of clothing which exert undue pressure upon the nerves and blood vessels of the breasts are contraindicated.

Now and then a mother will not be able to secrete sufficient milk for her infant. This is accounted for in many cases by bad environment, unhappiness, nervousness, poor housing, lack of fresh air, sunshine and outdoor life; or possibly overemphasis upon social life.

If the mother is well, the new babe should be put to the breast 12 hours after birth and allowed to nurse one breast for five minutes every four hours. Milk flow will usually begin on the third or fourth day after delivery. Even before normal milk has been established, a dilute solution of milk sugar may be given to prevent an appreciable loss of weight. As soon as the milk arrives in full force the baby is put to breast every two and a half hours and allowed to nurse for 20 minutes.

Regularity is essenial. If sleeping, the baby must be wakened and kept alert while at the breast. Night nursing after 10 o'clock is to be avoided, although in some instances a 2 a. m. feeding will be necessary. This break in the mother's rest—if permitted at all—should not continue after the sixth week, as the baby will sleep the night through, provided enough food has been supplied during the daytime.

One of the cardinal signs of insufficient food is crying and fretfulness. After the infant is two weeks old the amount of breast milk taken at each feeding should average at least two and a half ounces. Young mothers should not be disturbed if the baby spits or vomits occasionally because of an overabundance of milk. If the symptom persists, however, it is sometimes found to be due to too much fat in the mother's diet. This factor is easily corrected.

Complete weaning should occur about the ninth month. As the breast milk begins to fail supplementary bottle feeding will be needed, although the flow of mother's milk may be stimulated by proper diet and the use of large quantities of fluids.

As most of us know, deaths from intestinal upsets are more common in infants under 1 year of age. The possibility of such an event is greatly decreased by breast feeding. There are fewer chances for error. All in all, there is but one real justification for the inauguration of bottle feeding at the outset, and that is the presence of some disease on the part of the mother which would influence the quality of the infant's food.

Individuality Of U. S. Women Awes Japanese

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WOMEN of the West have been an eye-opener to dark, dainty Mme. Suzuyo Imamura of Tokyo, Japan. Even after 11 months in this country, she still finds them surprising in both attitude and action. But she also finds them "the most magnetic, most inspiring individuals" she has ever seen.

Yesterday she revealed this as she compared American with Japanese women and told something of what she wants to take back from this country to her sisters across the Pacific.

"I want to tell them how every American woman develops her talents as an individual; how each is a vital person—choosing her own career, deciding whether her interests will be centered around her home or a position in public life," she said in measured, carefully pronounced phrases. "I also want to tell my women how women here keep themselves informed on everything that happens, and here, whether they work outside the home or not, they are still an active part of public life."

Home Woman's Place in Japan.

She pointed out the Japanese woman's sphere is still chiefly the home. "The reason for this is not so much that our husbands or fathers want us to stay out of public life; it is rather that the Japanese woman has so much to do at home, she rarely finds time for any other activity."

Japanese family life, rooted in tradition, is a much more complicated thing than its American counterpart, according to Mme. Imamura. "From what I have observed here, when a young man marries, he and his wife set up a household of their own, entirely separate from the parental home of either. They then have only themselves to support. Their own household is their chief concern. But in my country, all relatives—even distant ones—are considered a part of each man and woman's immediate family circle.

"A wealthy man shares his worldly goods with all his kin. A poverty-stricken person looks to all his blood relations for help. The younger and stronger members of each family support the older and weaker. Few young couples are

This is in keeping with the tendency to cling to traditions, she said. Other evidence that old, rather than new customs still have a large following in Japan lies in the fact many marriages today are arranged by parents and guardians; pouring and drinking tea continues to be a ceremonial event; and Japanese women, today as always, make flower arrangement an art, the result of long years of study.

Clings to Traditional Dress.

Mme. Imamura herself has made the East and West meet in her attire. Her hair, bobbed since she came to this country, might be the coiffure of any Occidental woman, but while she has some American ensembles, she still prefers to wear her kimono and obi, which it seems must be much more becoming than American fashions to her straight, lacquer-like hair and oriental features.

She also effected something of a compromise between Japanese tradition and Western attitudes when she left her home and husband ("who is much more understanding than most men in my country") in Tokyo and came to this country to spend a year preparing to be a Y. W. C. A. secretary.

"It is a most unusual thing for a Japanese woman to be away from her home and husband as long as I have," she admitted. "But he was as eager for me to get this training as I was."

The Y. W. C. A. offers Occidental women a choice line of contact with the world outside the home, she said. Her interest in developing this avenue, that leads women into public endeavor," and gives them opportunities something like women have in America," was what prompted Mme. Imamura to come here for her training.

After spending some time on the West Coast studying dramatic and welfare work in connection with her preparation in Y. W. C. A. activity, she came to Washington in February. She plans to stay here until summer when she will return to Tokyo, a full-fledged Y. W. C. A. secretary.

SUBSTITUTE SWEETHEART

By Priscilla Wayne

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE.

"THEN WE'LL DRIVE to the hospital now," Mr. Reagan said.

"I promised Jim that I'd bring you right away. He's too ill to argue with, so I could only say yes and be done with it."

"I'm glad," Ruth said, quite truthfully. "I want to do everything I can to help him get well. I reproach myself all the time that I didn't get away from that awful house somehow. Now that I'm away from all of them it seems perfectly cowardly that I could have let that thing go on day after day."

"No one could blame a girl for lack of courage in the hands of such an outfit. It's an almost unbelievable story. A girl held captive and a man being slowly poisoned to death, in the hands of three vicious persons. It's so weird that it seems it just couldn't have happened in real life."

"But it did, Mr. Reagan, I can't get away from the horror of it. I can close my eyes and see all of them again, guarding the doors."

"Child, you mustn't think of it any more than you have to. And don't mention it to Jim. He is very ill. It will be days before he realizes fully everything that is happening around him.

"And that part of the story, too, is stranger than fiction. He thinks that he is married to a young and beautiful girl. In every conscious period that he has he asks for his wife."

"And I must pretend to be his wife?"

"Yes, Ruth. It can only be for a few days at most. He's getting better very quickly. Just as soon as he is strong enough so that the shock will not be too serious, he can be told the story."

Perhaps Ruth did not realize the distress her voice indicated. "And then?"

Robert Reagan, old in experience, wise in the ways of human kind, merely smiled. "Not being married, child, is a drawback easily remedied for a man and a girl who care very much for each other."

"You think that Jim cares?" a happiness indescribable flooded Ruth's heart at his words.

"Of course I do. If I'm any judge of affairs of the heart—and I ought to be—I've been married to one woman for almost 40 years and I love her today more than the day I married her.

"If that makes me any judge, then Jim Bradley loves you. It doesn't matter that your name is different, it doesn't matter that you're really a different girl than the girl he thinks you are. You're the girl he loves."

They entered the great stone hospital.

"Mr. Bradley has a suite on the fifth floor. There's a comfortable waiting room connected with the suite. I'm afraid you'll be obliged to spend most of your time there."

"I don't mind. If I can see Jim part of the time."

They passed a door marked "No visitors," entered the door next to it.

Ruth found herself in a small, but comfortable, corner room. There were tables with magazines, several comfortable chairs, convenient reading lamps.

"Better just take off your wraps and make yourself at home," Robert Reagan suggested. "This will probably be your home for the next two or three days. I'm not sure, but I think perhaps arrangements can be made for you to sleep and have your meals right here in the hospital. We'll talk to the nurse."

Jim's nurse came in a few minutes later. The very first sight of this older woman in her spotless cap and apron comforted Ruth, reassured her.

"I take it you're Mrs. Bradley?"

Mr. Reagan covered the awkward conversational gap and tided Ruth over her momentary confusion. "I told you that I'd bring her, Miss Wheeler. Mrs. Bradley wants to stay right here or close to the hospital."

"We can make arrangements." Miss Wheeler shook hands cordially with Ruth. "I'm glad you're here. I've been having diffulty explaining to Mr. Bradley why you did not come."

Miss Wheeler watched Ruth's face carefully. This whole situation seemed very peculiar; she kept telling herself. The wealthy man had been brought into the hospital almost dead with a slow poison and here was his young wife. Looked like a sensible, honest girl at that.

Well, Miss Wheeler decided, after all, that part of it wasn't in her hands.

"Mr. Bradley's just awakened. He had a nice nap after his bath this morning. He feels much stronger. I wonder if you ought not to go in right now and visit with him a little?"

"I'd like to, so much." Ruth wondered if the quiet, efficient nurse who seemed to know such a very great lot could hear the pounding of her heart.

"Let me go in first, for a minute, and warn him that you're coming."

Robert Reagan was smiling as he turned to Ruth. "Listen to me, child, are you willing to take an old man's advice?"

"Yes, oh yes." Ruth wondered what he would say. Hoped he might say the things that were in her heart.

He did. "Ruth, you're a pretty girl and you're a good girl. I've had you all checked up. Jim Bradley would be a lucky man if he won you and you're a foolish girl if you don't go in that room and help him win."

"You think that I should—should——"

"I think that you should walk into that room exactly as though you walked into the room of your dearly beloved young husband. Love is the loveliest thing in the world. Good luck to you, dear."

But it was not an easy thing to follow Miss Wheeler into that room and up to the bed where Jim lay very, very quietly.

He seemed, then, unbelievably thin and his face had the chalkiness of one long and seriously ill. His dark eyes, piercingly intent in spite of their blindness, seemed to search through Ruth's face to her very heart.

She breathed more easily when Jim's quick restless hand on the coverlet groped for hers. "June, June dear."

"June, it's been a long time. I wondered——"

"You wondered why I hadn't come to see you?"

"Yes, dear."

"They wouldn't let me," some little demon in Ruth's mental makeup grinned at that very true, yet misleading statement. "They wouldn't let me. You were very weak. But now you're getting better."

"Now I'm getting better." There was a decided note of joy in the sick man's voice.

"Now you're getting better, we aren't going to talk too much about it. We're just going to be very quiet. Time enough to talk when you're all well again. Right now you're going back to sleep and I'm going to sit here and hold your hand and pat your shoulder and——"

"And kiss me, sweetheart."

"And kiss you, sweetheart—oh, kiss you many times." Ruth's voice was husky with emotion. She bent over Jim. Made good her promise.

Robert Reagan had been standing at the doorway, watching the little scene. "Come out here a minute, nurse," he said softly, his own voice husky with emotion.

They went back into the little waiting room.

Nurse Wheeler closed the door softly, stood facing the attorney. "Oh, I envy them, I envy them," the calm little nurse was saying, and strangely enough, her eyes were filled with tears. "Love—young love is the sweetest thing in all the world."

"You know, nurse?"

"He died in the Argonne," Nurse Wheeler said after a little, makhandkerchief. "We had been marying a wad of her tear dampened ried only six weeks when he sailed. I never saw him again."

Robert Reagan turned away. Somehow he wanted to see his own Ruth who had been his loving wife for almost 40 years.

He hoped, with all his middle-aged heart, that the young folks would make a "go" of it.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: As a long-time resident of Washington, one who has reared a family here, I should like to direct some comment to those who write to your column asking advice on how to make friends here. When we were newcomers, we joined a neighborhood church and started in to like and be liked by our neighbors. However, the church offered us little. There was little cordiality between those with little cash and those with much of this world's goods. We of little means were expected, apparently, to do the menial tasks of waiting table, washing dishes, cooking, shining silver, running errands, buying vegetables, taking home laundry, etc. Of course, I was willing to do my part of the manual labor, but I sometimes wondered "What price effort?" when year after year I watched the moneyed group maintain its own closed circle, with chairs tilted at reserved tables to exclude those who did not belong to their group of friends, even at the most informal affairs.

I do not recommend churches for trying to break the spell of friendliness. One will be given work, all right. But when the work is done, that is the end of it. Selfishness surely abounds in Washington churches, and yet I do not mean this is an aspersion on the church as an institution, nor upon all church members. I was brought up in an atmosphere of working for the church, and every so often we engaged in money-raising activities for our church. But it was in a community everyone fraternized and everyone enjoyed the effort. We did not work from week to week and from 10 until 10.

* * * *

My son bankrupted the family purse to join a fraternity and is the only member of the family whose frendships seem to be progressing satisfactorily. Yet I don't recommend fraternities for promoting friendships, except for the wealthy, and I think it is positively ignoble to have the schools virtually overrun by fraternities as they are in Washington.

* * * *

My daughters are clean, wholesome girls, not too prudish to drink a cocktail or to smoke occasionally, yet wise enough to draw the line at intemperance. They are not the spinster type. They have a sense of humor, are to be trusted on their own, are privileged to entertain at home with music, games or any wholesole diversion and so far have been everything that a parent could expect. But they do not make social contacts unless with persons from other places. There is something wrong with this town, regardless of what neighborhood one may live in. I have lived in two neighborhoods which were not mediocre. My sympathy goes out to lonely young people, for I know that many of those who appeal to you for advice on how to make friends are nice youngsters, hungry to get a healthy kick out of life. But I certainly don't think that joining church is going to solve their problem. Members are too smug and self satisfied and ministers too overworked to take adequate account of the needs of the lonely.

* * * *

I wish such persons might be helped to find friends, particularly because so many of them have come here with the expectancy of leading more useful and cultural lives. I wish some nondenominational District society or group could be organized for the purpose of offering a get-acquainted social program to newcomers and lonely persons. Or perhaps two State societies might arrange a social meeting with members of two other State societies, the guest list to be restricted to persons from 18 years of age to 25, or perhaps 30. I have written too much, I know, but I have a sincere desire to help youngsters lead clean lives and would like particularly to make more contacts with persons from my own State of Kentucky. Do you think a social alliance between the many State societies in the District could be arranged? I might ask my Congressman's wife to help. Very sincerely, M. T.

Get Congressman's Offering.

DEAR M. T.: I hesitate to say whether or not an alliance of the sort you suggest could be arranged by State societies in the District. Why don't you get the opinion of your Congressman in the matter?

In direct contrast to your rather pessimistic findings regarding social opportunities for newcomers in Washington are the opinions presented in the following letter, written by a woman who, after six years' residence here, proclaims Washington her favorite city of all the cities she has known.

M. H.

Good Address Pays

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Recent letters to your column asking suggestions on how to make friends in Washington inspire in me a desire to delve my spade into the discussion . . . I came to Washington six years ago and came alone. I did not know a soul. But I was fortified with a fund of inner contentment. I possess adaptability and I am a good mixer. Now, after six years, I have three real friends and quite a number of acquaintances. I believe I may say without conceit that if I had the means to entertain I would be quite popular . . . I believe in living in a good neighborhood, at a good address. I always used that method of meeting the kind of people I wished to know when I was rearing my family in the Middle West. It paid dividends.

* * * *

To use a homely phrase, a great many of these people who come to Washington from smaller cities of 50,000 to 100,000 population, are not "city broke," I am referring to those who find fault with conditions here. One has to meet people half way, use tact in drawing them out conversationally and finding out what things they are interested in, and above all, to be a good listener. So-called good conversationalists are not always interesting persons. Too often their conversation is made up of chatter, gossip and rattling of family skeletons.

* * * *

I have found the way to make rineds is to go quietly about one's affairs; to be kind and considerate of others, and to make the most of the acquaintances one meets, all of whom may not be to one's liking, but who, if cultivated, may bring one into contact with others more congenial. I have lived in cities both larger and smaller than Washington, but I have found Washington more to my liking than any other city I ever lived in. Sincerely,

SIXTY-"OUR.

Sisson Scores Blanton Bloc On Red Stand

Charges That Hearing Was Unfair; Attacks Jenckes Aid.

By James D. Secrest.

With scathing sarcasm, Representative Sisson (Democrat), of New York, yesterday assailed on the House floor the author of the anti-red rider and his associates who are trying to prevent a vote on the bill to repeal it before adjournment.

Sisson began his speech with the now-famed quotation from Representative Blanton's speech in the House March 30:

"The time has come when we Democrats must weed all pinks and reds out of our Government. I have lowered my visor; I have unsheathed my sword; I hae entered the lists; I am at war to the finish against all Communists and subversive enemies of good government."

To this the New Yorker replied:

"I should like to have it recorded of me also and handed down to my descendants that I am now and always have been opposed to Communism and to any other kind of ism or thing which is subversive of our institution and our form of government.

Carries No Sword.

"I cannot hope, however, to compete in the public view with the gentleman from Texas in his spectacular method of warfare. I have no visor; I carry no sword; I do not know how to conduct myself wearing helmet or armor or brandishing a sword. Neither have I learned to argue or debate by hurling epithets."

The sub-committee on District appropriations, of which Blanton is chairman, was denounced by Sisson for holding "star chamber" hearings on Communism.

Labeling the investigation a "one-sided trial," the New Yorker said:

"It was not a hearing; it was an inquisition such as might have been conducted by Philip of Spain or the bloody Jeffries, infamous as the hanging judge in English history in the time of James II.

"And, despite all this, not a single instance was porduced by any of the witnesses where they dared or ventured to name any teacher who they claimed had advocated Communism in the schools of the District."

Ridicules Authority.

Sisson ridiculed Blanton's authority for charges that Dr. Charles A. Beord, Prof. George S. Counts and Dr. W. W. Charters are Communists.

"His authority for the statement that Dr. Beard—probably generally recognized as our greatest living American historian—and these other gentlemen are Communists," he said, "is a book called 'The Red Network,' written by Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling.

"The author of this book attempted to get it accepted by the D. A. R. some years ago, but when the matter was brought to the attention of the present president general it was refused. The D. A. R. is generally considered to be at least sufficiently conservative, rather than liberal."

Sisson pointed out that "The Red Network' 'also lists, among other "dangerous radicals, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Senator Borah and Newton D. Baker.

" Iam sure if it were necessary for the gentlemen's contention he could very easily go back to a much earlier period that his investigation has covered and prove, for example, that most of the characters who have appeared in either profane or sacred history were either Communists or tainted with Communism, as adjudged by his I. Klux Klan tsandards," Sisson observed.

No Personal Advantage.

Presenting a factual record of the history of the anti-red rider, the New oYrker, a former president of a board of education, asserted that he will gain no personal advantage by the passage of his repeal bill.

"It is of great importance to our American teachers an dthe boys and girls in our schools, and to the dignity and good name of Congress, that the repeal bill should be passed," he said.

No State or country has ever enacted a stimilar law, he declared, and "its existence in a Federal statute is making Congress ridiculous in the eyes of the country."

It also is "injuring the spirit and morale of the teachers and is making them ridiculous in the eyes of their pupils," he added.

"This law is gaining Communists and Communism free advertising and exploitation that they could not have gotten otherwise for millions of dollars. It invests Communists and Communism with an appearance of strength and importance that they do not possess.

"That, here in the Nation's Capital, Congress should find it necessary to put such a law upon the statute books lends more strength and encouragement to Communism than anything I can imagine."

Sisson poked fun at Blanton's threats to invade his district and that of Representative Mary T. Norton in New Jersey because they have stood up against him.

He suggegsted that the Texan might go into Indiana, as well, to defend Representative Jenckes, who stood with him in the Communism fight.

"Then, after he explains to the voters in his own district how he can spend so much of his time away from his duty or looking after the District and so little after his own constituents, why then he can go to work on Texas.

"Of course, after polishing his armor and grinding his sword and pulling down his visor he can enter the lists against the teachers down there who have committed the crime of attending the Teachers' College at Columbia University."

Attacks Jenckes Aid.

Sisson attacked an assistant of Mrs. Jenckes, by the name of Serkowich, who appeared as a witness before the House sub-committee on appropriations, as "a man of unsavory reputation" and pointed out that he had refused to answer the Kennedy sub-committee's request that he appear before it.

From Fireman to Fisherman

Retiring Fireman Recalls Days Before Motor Replaced Horse

David Grady Believes Seat Behind Chargers Was Better Than Guiding Huge Trucks at Greater Speed; He Plans Fishing Trip With Wife.

A seat behind the galloping hoofs of three fire horses and the tug of the reins on your arms is better than driving an 80-horsepower fire truck, confessed David P. Grady, who retired yesterday from the fire department after 17 years' service.

Grady, who is 42 and lives at 705 Sixteenth street northeast, should know. He joined the department just after the World War, in the days when Dobbin was still king, and sat behind the reins until 1924, when his company, No. 27 Engine, was motorized.

When the Galliher & Huguely lumber yard went up in flames in 1924 Grady made one of his last trips with the horses to fill in for another company. Soon after gasoline defeated the horse and Grady found himself behind the wheel of a fire truck.

"It wasn't much fun after the old horses had gone," he said. "Why in those days when we came charging down the street people moved over. Today you have to whisper a prayer and hope the motorist gives you right of way."

His mates, who gathered around to see him leave, explained that because of a motorist's failure to give the engines right of way Grady received head injuries that caused his retirement yesterday.

The retired smoke-eater won't chase fire engines for the rest of his days.

"Tomorrow I'm taking my wife, Pauline, and we are going on a trip," said Grady.

"Where to? I don't know and don't care. We are just going to keep riding for a while, and when we are tired we'll turn back. I've been wanting to take a trip for 17 years, and this is my first chance to do it."

With him will go a fishing rod and tackle presented by members of No. 27 Engine Company.

Bus Ventilation To Be Checked By Health Aids

U. S. Service Will Assist District Employes in Series of Tests.

Systematic check of ventilation in the buses is to be begun this week by Health Department employes, assisted by experts of the United States Public Health Service.

Aid of the Public Health Service had been requested by Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer, at the instance of William A. Roberts, people's counsel, and instruction of Health Department men in use of special equipment was begun yesterday.

Dr. James G. Cumming, head of the communicable disease division, and some of his assistants went to the Public Health Service laboratory where the testing equipment was explained to them. They are to be further instructed later this week, and then tests are to be begun, with the aid of Public Health Service men.

The tests will show not only the amount of carbon dioxide in the air in buses, but also the amount of carbon monoxide—a deadly poison—and other dangerous gases or germs. They also will show whether the ventilating system on buses is adequate to provide a change of 20 cubic feet of air per passenger per minute. That is the amount fixed as necessary by Federal architects in prescribing standards for offices and auditoriums.

Particular attention is to be paid to the types of buses from which largest number of complaints have been made. The same rule also is to be followed as to particular routes and hours of the day, Roberts said.

An order requiring improved ventilation of buses is under preparation by the Public Utilities Commission.

Plan to Deter Crime Urged By Bar Unit

Information Bureau and Simplified Municipal Laws Favored.

Federal promotion of uniform co-operative methods among the States, establishment of State supervisory law enforcement agencies and simplification of municipal dealing with minor offenders were three recommendations for improvement of criminal law procedure in the report of a special committee of the Federal Bar Association made public last night.

The committee was headed by E. Barrett Prettyman, recently resigned District corporation counsel. Members were H. Loy Anderson, H. Milton Colvin and Gordon Dean.

"There seems to be available to Federal offiials an opportunity for service without glory in the use of the facilities which they possess for promoting co-operation between the States," the report stated.

Favors Information Bureau

"We favor the establishment under Federal auspices of a clearing house for information in regard to crime and criminals. It should collect not only such valuable data as identification material, but material useful in the drafting of effective statutes on such common subjects as bail, parole, probation, habitual crime, etc.

"We also believe that Federal authorities might well encourage a system of mutual recognition by bordering States of a limited number of enforcement officers for quick service in cases which cross State lines either in escape or in continuous commission.

"Thus, or example, Maryland, Virginia and the District might each severally grant authority to a selected group of enforcement officers for service in the detection and apprehension of criminals who roam over those three jurisdictions. Much delay and embarrassment might thus be avoided."

The remedy within States, the committee stated, would be a central supervisory power with Statewide authority, not to supersede, but to co-ordinatem local agencies.

Problem of Cities.

"Within municipalities," the committee reported, "the great problem arises from the sheer mass of criminal work which modern civilization has brought upon us.

"Building laws, sanitary laws, labor laws, liquor laws and, chief of all, traffic laws, have created within the last quarter-century an almost countless mass of small cases which, while individually of small moment, are in the aggregate of major importance."

Simplification of these local laws, the committee believes, would "relieve municipal enforcement officers of many of their difficulties and would elevate the enforcement of law to a much higher plane in the eyes of the great body of citizenry whose only contact with law is in the minor criminal, or police courts."

Rector Holds Radio Helps Curb Bigotry

Prejudice and bigotry in America have been curbed with radio aid, the Right Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, Catholic University rector, yesterday told the Catholic International Broadcasting Congress in Prague, Czechoslovakia, by short wave radio.

"In America," he said, "the radio has brought many unbelievers not often perhaps to an open profession of religious faith, but to a knowledge that has helped immeasurably in doing away with intolerance and misunderstanding."

He congratulated the Congress for spreading "truth and light" so that "all men may know and love God and, for His sake, be united ever more closely in the bond of Christian charity."

Traffic Toll Here in Year Reaches 34

Jury Releases N. F. Ladd on Evidence Boy, 6, Ran Into Street.

Victim of Accident Last Saturday Dies in Hospital.

The year's traffic death toll of the District rose to 34 yesterday with the death of Charles Jackson, 44, Negro, of 1406 Belmont street northwest, at Emergency Hospital.

Jackson was injured Saturday night when he was struck by a car which police said was operated by Emory F. Best, 17, of 1321 Fairmont street northwest. His squll and ribs were injured.

A coroner's jury yesterday exonerated Nivan F. Ladd, 28, of 325 Longfellow street northwest, after an inquest into the traffic death of Richard Lloyd, 6, of 60 I street northwest.

Richard died in Sibley Hospital Sunday from skull injuries after he was knocked down Friday by an automobile operated by Ladd while he was playing on First street between I and K streets northwest.

Witnesses testified that the child ran into the street from behind parked automobiles. They stated Ladd jammed on his brakes in an attempt to stop, but was unable to do so.

Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran took the personal bond of a Negro on four traffic violation charges and then reprimanded Policeman Irving Lubore for not charging the man with reckless driving.

The defendant, Clyde D. Nelson, 32, of 1211 Harvard street northwest, was charged with speeding, failure to halt at a stop sign, driving on the wrong side of the street and failing to stop when emerging from an alley.

Sentence Suspended.

Judge Curran said:

"There is no question that this man is guilty of speeding. The court is also convinced that he failed to stop at the sign when he came from the alley. The court also believes that he drove on the wrong side of the street, but because he was brought in here on all these petty charges instead of reckless driving, I am going to suspend sentence.

"Officers are not going to be allowed to clutter up my court with petty cases."

Nelson was arrested Saturday on Firts street between K and H streets northwest. Lubore testified the man was going between 35 and 40 miles-an-hour at the time.

One driving permit was revoked and 21 others suspended for temporary periods when the Revocations Board acted on the cases of 22 motorists convicted of speeding.

James W. Proctor, 2535 Sheridan road southeast, lost his license for speeding 66 miles-an-hour, while Bernard L. Poole, 1420 Crittendon street northwest, and Jack Rosenberg, 1415 Tenth street northwest, had their permits suspended for 45 days. Both were convicted of second offense speed of 40 miles.

Thirty-day suspensions went to Milton E. Pier, 625 I street northwest, 40 miles; Pierre Poirier, 1402 Emerson street northwest, 40 miles; Henry E. Preston, 3200 Tennyson street northwest, 45 miles; Ernest Reynolds, 722 Fourth street northeast, 49 miles; Wilburn D. Ruth, jr., 3007 Cambridge place northwest, 42 miles; Louis Salem, 1739 I street northwest, 46 miles; Arthur E. Taw, 6409 Western avenue northwest, 40 miles; Nik Vlahos, 1225 K street northwest, 40 miles; Carl E. Wanamaker 1862 Mintwood place northwest, 42 miles; Ernest W. Washington, 1117 Twenty-first street northwest, 40 miles.

Suspensions of 15 days went to Thomas M. Purdy, 5805 Chevy Chase Parkway northwest, 38 miles; Norman L. Sabatini, 517 Lonafellow street northwest, 38 miles; Richard B. Schmits, 128 U street northeast, 38 miles; Alfred W. Sherman, 6308 Ninth street northwest, 36 miles; Cloyd D. Swofford, 1519 Fifth street northwest, 35 miles; David F. Viands, 1235 C street northeast, 36 miles; Bernard Washington, 920 Hughes court northwest, 35 miles; James L. Young, jr., 2243 Wisconsin avenue northwest, 36 miles; Howard C. Zahniser, 3220 Connecticut avenue northwest, 36 miles.

Handicraft of WPA Workers Shown in Mayflower Exhibit

Articles of Thousands of Women and Professional Groups on Display; Blind Girl Demonstrates Method of Producing Braille Books

The crafts of several hundred thousand women and professional workers on WPA rolls—skill for which private industry has no use—are on display in the lobby of the Hotel Mayflower.

Children's clothing, toys, handicraft objects, copper dishes, paintings, rugs and chairs, made by the jobless, and charts showing what the WPA is doing to stimulate health immunization and to provide school children with hot lunches, are some of the items in the exhibit that has been set up in conjunction with the meeting of the State and regional directors of the division of women's and professional projects that opened yesterday. The exhibit closes tonight.

One of the high lights of the exhibit is a demonstration of how Braille books are made, by Elizabeth Clancy, of Massachusetts, a blind girl on the WPA roll. With expert fingers she inserts the sheet of durable manila paper in the heavy steel-white Braille typewriting machine. There are six keys, corresponding to the number of dots in the Braille letters, and through combinations of these any letter on the ordinary typewriter can be reproduced.

Pounding the keys of a Braille machine is slower work than handling the ordinary typewriter, but it requires only a few minutes to prepare a page of Braille "copy." As she rereads it, Miss Clancy explians, if she discovers an error, a fingernail will "erase" the wrong dot.

In another corner of the lobby is an old-fashioned weaving loom, similar to those used in colonial times. Heaped around the loom are the bankets, rugs and shawls that the women made with the looms. Alongside are several exhibits of clothes made by the women, ranging from sun suits for little children and lumberjackets for school boys to trousers for father and dresses for mother.

Mrs. Roosevelt Defends Relief Work Program

She and Hopkins Both Urge New Deal Projects Over Dole.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and PWA Administrator Harry Hopkins yesterday defended work relief as contrasted with the dole when they spoke at a luncheon meeting of the regional and State directors of the Division of Women's and Professional Projects of the WPA at the Mayflower Hotel.

Assailing the "handing out of baskets of groceries" as the "most wasteful way of spending funds and the most outrageous treatment of the unemployed," Hopkins predicted that "more steps will be taken" towards the goal of "real security and a fair share of the national income for those at the bottom of the economic heap."

Indorsing his defense of work relief, Mrs. Roosevelt urged an educational campaign that will make the "one-half of the people who have somthing understand what happens when 'hat something is taken away."

Although the only partisan reference in Hopkins's speech was a quip about "five little kittens who were born Republican, but became Democrats as soon as their eyes were opened," the WPA administrator made it clear that the Administration would stand by its work relief program in the coming elections.

"Loose Talking."

"There has been a lot of loose talking about turning relief over to the States, despite that we've had a lot of experience with that," he said.

"But that is not the real issue," he continued. "The real issue is whether people without jobs through no fault of their own should be given work or a dole. I would like to see that issue debated from one end of the country to the other—and I intend to take part in that debate to a good extent myself."

The meeting of the State directors will continue through tomorrow. At a luncheon today, Secretary of Labor Frances L. Perkins will speak.

Palmer Convalescing.

M. Mitchell Palmer, former Attorney General in the Cabinet of President Wilson, who is recovering from an appendicities operation in Emergency Hospital, was reported "progressing satisfactorily" yesterday.

Templeton to Preside At Medical Meeting

Dr. Earl R. Templeton will preside over the opening session tomorrow of the annual scientific assembly of the District Medical Society which will be held in the society's auditorium, 1718 M street northwest.

Addresses by Drs. Charles W. Clarke, J. W. Lindsay, M. A. Selinger, E. C. Rice, James A. Lyon, Edmund Horgan, J. Bay Jacobs, J. C. Reisinger and Col. H. C. Pillsbury will feature the inaugural program. Two motion pictures on medical subjects also will be shown.

'Rainbow Division' Veterans Meet Tonight

Veterans of the famous Rainbow, or Forty-second Division, American Expeditionary Forces, will gather tonight for a dinner meeting in Schneider's Cafe, 427 Eleventh street northwest, with Gov. Blanton Winship of Puerto Rico, former judge advocate general of the division, as invited honor guest.

Col. John Monroe Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, who commanded the 117th Engineers of the division, and William H. Kay, former private, are slated for nominations to the presidency.

Citizens Back Parkometers In Resolution

Takoma Park Group Is Opposed to Cencessionnaires

The Forest Hill Citizens Association last night adopted a resolution presented by Col. Lawrence Crawford, chairman of the streets and traffic committee, to install "park-o-meters" in the downtown area.

The resolution was seconded by Charles D. Hamel, vice president of the association, who said, "I don't think Congress should be permitted to dictate what the District should use to regulate traffic.. "Whether the meters are satisfactory makes no difference,, we should at least be allowed to try them out if the District Commissioners care to do so."

Oppose Raising Limit.

The group opposed a pending regulation raising the age limit from 16 to 18 years for application for auti drivers' permits.

Richard Wright, 4620 Thirtieth street northwest, winner of a Post scholarship to Georgetown University, was invited to address the group at the next meeting.

L. A. Carruthers was re-elected president.

Others elected were Charles D. Hamel, vice president; J. M. McCollum, treasurer, and Mrs. Leslie B. Wright, secretary. Mrs. Wilbur LaRoe and Richard A. Ham were appointed to the executive committee. Joseph Sanders was appointed as a delegate to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Three former presidents of the groups gave short talks in connection with the seventh anniversary of the association, which was celebrated at the meeting.

Takoma Park Group Meets.

The Citizens Association of Takoma Park, D. C., last night adopted a resolution opposing the proposed releasing to concessionaires of District recreation facilities.

The group contended that only a few recreation centers are supporting themselves, and only bids for the prosperous centers would be submitted. Should this be allowed the District would have added burdens to carry without incomes from the few centers now paying for themselves, it was said.

Dupont Circle.

A new set of officers was toasted into office at the meeting of the Dupont Circle Citizens Association yesterday afternoon.

Head waiters and numerous attendants brought four bottles of champagne and corks popped merE. G. Bliss outlined the accomplishrily in the background, while Col. ments of the association for the past two years. A pause was called, and the new president, Demarest Lloyd, took the chair, while waiters passed the glasses. Business was renewed after the toast.

A report from the zoning committee was presented and the other new officers, Floyd Crosby, first vice president; Woodson P. Houghton, second vice president; Col. H. C. Clark, treasurer, and Roland Marshall, secretary, were introduced.

Manor Park.

Questoins of traffic and transportation held the attention of the Manor Park Citizens Association last night.

In a resolution, the group called the attention of the National Park and Planning Commission to plans to widen Blair road between Peabody and underwood streets, which, it was said, is opposed by residents of the area unless steps be taken to eliminate two bottlenecks and other traffic hazards which the widening would create.

In other resolutions, the association asked Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer to take steps to relieve congestion on Kennedy street between Georgia avenue and Third street and to ban parking on one side of Fifth street from Grant Circle to Takoma Park.

Kenilworth.

The Kenilworth Citizens Association discussed plans for a celebration of the opening of the new Kenilworth boulevard, soon to be completed, at its meeting last night.

The association voted to request garbage collection three times a week in its area, and went on record as against proposed "parkometers."

Expert Inspects Clock Atop Old Postoffice, Finds It Undamaged by Bolt Which Hit Tower

Timepiece Once Stopped by Nests Built by Pigeons.

French C. Smith—he's a clock-fixing man from a clock-fixing land—climbed up 99 steps to the turret of the old Postoffice Building on Pennsylvania avenue yesterday afternoon, unlocked the door to a big room where that elusive element—time—is manufactured by a clock with four faces twice as big as you are tall.

Lightning crackled down on the Postoffice Building Sunday, just a few feet above the clock, and the turret cought fire. Smith, who fixes all the Government clocks in Washington, was just on an inspection tour to see if Washington's "Big Ben" was ticking out the time as smoothly as it should.

Smith came down from Lancaster, Pa., several yaers ago to work on mainsprings and dials for the Government. Lancaster is a clock-making center, and Smith knows all about the eccentricities and temperaments of clocks.

It so happened that the big clock which has been lolling away the hours atop the postoffice since the building was erected was working just as smoothly as clocks should. The lightning did harm it. It didn't melt its 600-pounds hands, nor mar its 25-foot faces.

Smith, still panting from climbing the 99 steps from the eighth floor—that's the highest the elevator climbs—unlocked the iron gate and entered the big gray room. It was quiet. The sun streamed in through the glass faces of the four big timepieces. By the shadows of the great hands, reading backward from the inside, it was 3:40 p. m.

Smith walked to the little cabinet in the center. There, locked and glassed in, the machanism of the clock—oiled and greased—controls the hands of the fourfaces. From the center mechanism just four rods equipped with clock gears. Smith, a medium-sized man with sandy hair, stood and peered into the glass casing. There wa sthe heart of the clock.

The machinery on the inside was about the size of the motor of a big limousin. Projecting was a rod. Smith said that was what they used to wind the clock once a week. It's like cranking a car, he said.

From the top of the machine emerged a piece of metal that resembled a wind vane. Back and forth it rocked every time you drew your breath. There was only the slightest ticking.

Said the clok:

"No, the lighting didn't get me. I couldn't afford to let it do that.

French C. Smith Climbs 99 Steps to Make Examination.

I've got to keep time. All people can't buy watches. What'd they do without me. I'll tell you, though, I fell kind of shaken up on the inside. The bolt joilted me a little, but I guess I'll keep on ticking for a little while."

Smith turned and laughed. "No, I don't guess lightning could stop her, but something did once. It was the only time, I think, except when we clean her.

"It was several years ago," he said. "Pigeons swirling around above the avenue didn't have a home. No home at all. The winter was severe. They had to have some place to go. The windows to the turret were left open. They were just little crevices, but big enough for the birds to get in. They came in and built their nests in the clock workings. I wasn't here, but they tell me they took four baskets of nests out of the clock."

"By what time medium is the clock set?" he was asked.

Smith replied: "By naval observatory time. But it isn't always right. It was two minutes slow this morning . . ."

Backers of Rival Orchestra Seek Watergate for Concerts

With a decision expected by this week-end, the contest for permission to conduct summer symphony concerts at the Arlington Bridge watergate this season moved forward yesterday whe Yasha Bunchuk and Fairfax Oyster conferred with C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital parks.

Bunchuk, conductor-cellist of stage and radio, is planning to organize a new symphony orchestra here. Oyster, a local businessman, is supporting the project. Yesterday they asked Finnan how to go about getting his permission to hold concerts at the watergate stadium.

The parks superintendent told them to submit in writing the following information: Nature and character of the proposed programs, financial responsibiltiy of the enterprise and a concert schedule—the number of programs planned per week, length of season and the time at which each concert would begin.

Today, said Finnan, he will confer with C. C. Cappel, manager of National Symphony Orchestra, which conducted a summer symphony series at the watergate last year and which is planning to resume the feature in the next few months.

Nazimova Wins Instant Favor In Ibsen Play

'Ghosts' Given a Superb Performance Before Rapt Audience.

By Nelson B. Bell.

THE CASTS.

Regina, ...Beatrice de Neergaard
Jacob Engstrand, ...Raymond O'Brien
Pastor Manders .....McKay Morris
Mrs. Alving .....Mme. Nazimova
Oswald Alving ..... Harry Ellerbe

It is a grim and relentless drama that Ibsen builded upon the theme of "the sins of the father shall be visited upon the son;" a compact, bitter and morbid study in the tragic consequences of a life blithely and disastrously dedicated to a grotesquely paradoxical "joy of living."

"Ghosts," as it was revealed in the National Theater last night, is staged and played with as great an economy of investiture and absence of obvious effort as the author exercised in writing it. The one setting in which the action takes place is the simple living room in the home of Mrs. Alving in western Norway. A table lamp and a floor lamp afford the gray room's only illumination. Only five characters are involved in the sordid story of a profligate father, his faithful and patient wife, their son and the man of the cloth and the servitors who, at first, seem to touch only the fringes of their family life.

As the devastating consequences of the son's inheritance from his father make themselves unmistakably manifest both to him and his mother, Mrs. Alving, adding a decisive tragic touch to the final scene, dissolves the doubt Ibsen left of his intention by administering the lethal dose that for all time will put to rest the lad who can only live to be an idiot.

tar Magnificent in Simplicity.

In the enactment of the courageous and utterly sympathetic role of Mrs. Alving, Nazimova is magnificently moving in the quiet anguish and superb strength of her portrayal. Only occasionally does she indulge in those impassioned flights in which voice, mobility of feature and gesture combine to create a perfect symbol of tragedy. For the remainder of the play she is a mouselike and placid little creature, breathing great vigor into a vital character by her deep consciousness of the mental, spiritual and physical turmoil through which that character has passed.

Under her own direction, Nazimova has given "Ghosts" an evenly-paced reading and interpretation in perfect consonance with the mood and purpose of the author. Her scenes with her son, Oswald, the young painter who has fallen heir to the penalties of his father's transgressions, mark the acme of fine limning.

Surrounded By Artists.

Much of the impressiveness of these periods of the play are due to the splendid account Harry Ellerbe gives of himself in fulfilling the exorbitant demands of the role of the neurotic son who knows that his mind is giving way, but is incapable of understanding why. His work justifies his selection for a part opposite so distinguished an actress as the star.

The three remaining members of the cast acquit themselves with no less credit in assignments of only slightly modified imposts. Nazimova hardly could have surrounded herself with players more wholly competent to discharged the tasks allotted them than Raymond O'Brien, Beatrice de Neergaard and McKay Morris.

"Ghosts" comes to the Capital late in the season, but it brings us so authentic a gem of both playwriting and acting that the eight curtain calls accorded its star and her supportlast night seemed meager acknowledgment of its worth.

About The Showshops

"THE EX-MRS. BRADFORD." Here is an interesting and, in some respects, novel comedy-mystery-romance that is almost another "Broadway Bill"—but not quite. At least it possesses the priceless virtue of getting consistently better and better—shades of old Doc Coue!—as it goes along.

NELSON B. BELL.

Starting at a slow pace and disclosing nothing that lets the audience into their secret, the early sequences of the action are distinctly baffling. All you know is that the wrong horse has won the sixth race, the jockey has fallen off the defeated favorite, dead, and a vast amount of money is supposed to have changed hands on the coup, although it never reaches the right ones.

In the meantime, a young divorcee with a penchant for writing mystery stories has returned to her divorced husband as a pretext to beating the alimony racket. At her behest Dr. Bradford is inveigled into attempting a solution of the mystery of the jockey's demise, which presents all of the post mortem symptoms of strangulation, asphyxiation, drowning and a few other minor mishaps to the human body—but nothing that left a mark. On the heels of this death come two more of violence, all presenting the same baffling symptoms.

During the development of the plot—which, by the way, would do credit to an Edgar Allen Poe, a Gaboriau or an S. S. Van Dine—a deal of what is supposed to be brittle and crackling dialogue is tossed around among the principals, for the greater part between William Powell, as Dr. Bradford, and Jean Arthur, as his flip young two-time wife. Some of this explosive persiflage goes off like a hand grenade and some of it merely sputters.

The picture unspools its climax and denouement much after the manner, and with much the same thrilling effect, as "Broadway Bill." It ends on a comedy note with a marriage ceremony that will be a surprise and is probably as permissible as utilizing the screen as evidence in criminal cases in lieu of a power-of-attorney. Whether inside the law or not, it is very, very funny.

This one opens at RKO-Keith's tomorrow, "The Witness Chair" having "laid an egg," as we say in Variety. I think you will like it. I did.

Since we have mentioned Poe, Gaboriau and Van Dine, it might be no more than fair to say that the lads who really are responsible for "The Ex-Mrs. Bradford" are James Edward Grant, who wrote the original story, and Anthony Veiller, who is credited with the screen adaptation. A helpful feature of the production is the appropriate and tuneful, but at no time too assertive, musical score, directed by Roy Webb. The cast fairly bristles with "names," in addition to those of the two co-stellar players. All that will be gone into in the more comprehensive—I hope—review scheduled for Thursday morning. These are merely quick reactions to yesterday afternoon's private preview in the Fox Film Exchange's projection room.

A two-page, single-spaced communication from one Georges A. Rubissow, 74 Bd. Exelmans, Paris—whose signature bears a strikingly close resemblance to a weather map, but whose name, happily, is printed as a part of his expansive letterhead—announces the organization of the "International Cine Film Eternity Museum Association." This, it seems, is the brief and simple name Mons. Rubissow has devised for his "cine film museum" or "eternal library."

This "eternal library" business evidently means precisely what it says. The plan is to secure and make "contretype negatives and copies to be sealed in airtight containers" of all the available films in the world that are worth saving for posterity. You will get the idea, perhaps, from a single paragraph in Mons. Rubissow's letter:

"There will be a plan for their management and preservation, certain films being resurrected or reproduced every 100 years, and demonstrated before the public, certain films will be reproduced every 300 or 500, most probably every 1,000, 2,000 and even 10,000 and 20,000 years hence."

Further along in his epistle, Mons. Rubissow states that "it is our duty to create this association for the benefit of the future generation."

From this, one gathers that he already has secured prints of "Down to Their Last Yacht" and the silent version of "The Girl of the Golden West!"

They won't be so much funnier 20,000 years from now than they were when first released, at that!

Maj. Edward Bowes, the big announcement and amateur man, quite obviously was not spoofing last evening when he said over the air that Washington had wired a request that last night's prize winner be immediately added to the current bill at the Earle Theater. The lad caught the first available train, after packing his toothbrush and fiddle, and appeared for the first time with the prevalent Bowes unit at yesterday afternoon's second stage show at the Earle. The youngster's name is Raymond Trotter and his artistry consists of combining violining with tap dancing. Just what the current crop of amateurs needed of another tap dancer, with Billy Clower and Gloria Rich still on the job, is not clear, but the answer seems to be that young Mr. Trotter trotted out there onto that rostrum and then trotted home with a substantial hit to his credit. Trotter is a youthful Philadelphian who learned both to fiddle and dance while attending business high school—from which he graduated successfully. I have known others who tried to fiddle and dance their way through school with less luck.

Natural Color On Screen Has Posed Problem

Chorus Costumes Become an Acute Dilemma; Fields' Fun.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, May 4.—Russell Lewis, eagle-beaked dance director, took one look at a color film of scantily draped chorus girls, and decided "the public is tired of looking at bodies."

The result is that the ensemble of pioneer's "Dancing Pirate" is draped to the ankles, but garments are cunningly contrived to balloon at each pirouette, permitting the audience eye-fleeting windshots at exposed epidermis.

Lewis might better have said that "we must not allow the imagination too much leeway," for the embarrassing fact is that nudity in color pictures is probably too "nude-looking" to get by censors.

Is Endless Controversy.

Even so, chorus draperies have been the subject of endless regulation by the Will Hays office, which has even prescribed acceptable use of make-up.

Nudity on the stage is much more authenitic, and has always drawn slings and arrows from censors. But even in the boldest burlesque a considerable distance separates audience and chorus, and make-up and other devices such as flesh-colored garments are extensively used.

In pictures, this distance is abolished, and in color pictures make-up, unless used sparingly, is instantly apparent.

Perhaps as a result of this, human flesh in all tinted films has developed in more than natural color, and a nude photograph, in hues, looks nuder than Sally Rand the day she dropped the fan.

Just how the censors feel about the matter has never been adequately tested, but the chances are that if colored musicals continue to grow in popularity a complete new set of rules will have to be worked out.

Another headache for the industry.

Bill's Spelling Bee.

The girl's job is to scribble Fields' improvisations in shorthand for incorporation in the script. Usually she can spell anything he can say, although he tries hard to stump her.

Fields' triumph occurred on the "Poppy" set when they came to a part where he was supposed to survey an imposing mansion and remark: "What a lovely cottage." Instead, he cracked:

"What a charming little lean-to. It reminds me of my wickiup on the Lim-Pòo-Poo."

Pressing his advantage in a scene with his cigar-box cello, the comedian altered a line which should have read "I will now play 'The Moonlight Sonata,'" to "I will now render the allegro movement from the Duggijigg Schrekensack Opera Gilka Kummel, an opus pippitone."

That completely routed the gal. But even Fields can't define an "opus pippitone."

To Furnish the Trunk?

Kingfish Levinsky, ex-Chicago fish peddler and fighter, follows the lead of Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom and will turn actor. He will appear in "The Trunk Murder Case," to be produced by Fenn Kimball.

Radio Workers Here For Service Meeting

Radio service men, technicians and dealers' salesmen from surrounding sections gathered here yesterday to attend a G-E radio service meeting at National Electrical Supply Co. The session was one o a Nation-wide series which is being conducted by the G-E radio division, General Electric Co., Bridgeport, Conn., and was under the supervision of M. A. Feldstein, G-E radio field engineer for this district.

Discussions embraced technical service information applicable to practically any receiver on the market, as well as explanations and demonstrations of the correct methods of short-cut "trouble-shooting."

Open in New Thriller Tomorrow

Having achieved something of a personal triumph with Gary Cooper in "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," Jean Arthur now scores again as the author of mystery-novels who decides to remarry her divorced husband, a society doctor, just in time to become involved in a more baffling murder puzzle than any she ever imagined for purposes of publication. This all happens in "The Ex-Mrs. Bradford," a mystery-comedy-romance of the medico's office and the race track opening on the screen at RKO-Keith's tomorrow. Miss Arthur and William Powell, who plays Dr. Bradford, are pictured above—after the war!

The Gossipel Truth.

Hollywood, May 4.

Clark Gable completed work last week in the flicker "San Francisco" and is supposed to start work today in the Marion Davies picture "Cain and Mabel." But in "San Francisco" Gable wears a mustache, his own, and in "Cain and Mabel" he plays the role of a clean-shaven prize-fighter. Metro won't allow Gable to shave off the mustache, for he may be needed for retakes in "San Francisco" and Warners insist that clean-shaven Gable start work. It's fun to hear the executives of both companies argue about Gables's mustache.

How a Baby GROWS

By Dr. Arnold Gesell, M. D.

INFANT SLEEP: Sleep is the prime essential for healthful growth. The baby grows while he sleeps. During sleep, nature gets in her chemical handiwork and builds the baby's food and experiences into growing tissues. So, each day, he awakes not only rested, but more mature. In the first row of pictures below, the camera catches a 12-week-old baby as he goes to sleep and awakes. In the second row, a 28-week-old baby is shown as he changes, quite naturally, his posture during a nap period. Daytime naps are as important as nighttime sleep. Outdoor air is usually best. The baby should be snug and warm, but not bound too tightly. Blankets should not be so loose that there is danger of smothering. TOMORROW: Two remarkable pictures, as the camera catches the split second between waking and sleep with a 16-week-old infant.

Briton Loses When Eye Is Badly Cut

Seconds Toss Towel In, Ending Battle That Had Been Even.

Freddie Miller, Sitting at Ringside, Advises Fine's Handlers.

By Bill McCormick.

Howard Scott, District lightweight champion, won on a fifth round technical knockout from Davey Fine, British lightweight champion, in a bout scheduled for 10 rounds at Turners Arena last night.

Not many of the 1,200 fight fans understood why Fine's seconds tossed in the towel as a signal of defeat a few seconds after the start of the fifth round, terminating what had been an even contest until then.

Fine entered the ring with his left eye taped. The tape was punched off in a few rounds. In the fourth, a straight right hand opened an old cut over Fine's left eye. As the fighter came back to his corner, he complained to his handlers that he could not see out of that eye.

Examination Refused.

The English battler's handlers conveyed this information to Referee Muggsy Morris, asking that a commission doctor be called into the ring to examine the cut. This was not done and the bell was rung to start the fifth.

As the round started, Fine's seconds sat helplessly in the corner.

"Throw in the towel," advised Featherweight Champion Freddie Miller, a ringside customer.

"Can we do that?" queried Fine's handlers. Upon being told that they could, they sent the towel fluttering into the ring, ending the fight.

Purse Temporarily Held.

The Boxing Commission ordered Fine's purse held up until a charge that the British boxer's seconds had used Monsel solution, forbidden in the District, to attempt to stop the flow of blood.

Commissioner Kenneth Parkinson listened to a report from Commission Physician H. J. McNitt to the effect that Fine's cut was deep in the left eyelid and would have anyway. Commissioner Parkinson made it necessary to stop the fight then, ordered Fine's purse paid, which was done.

Before the injury, Fine had displayed flashes of form that stamped him as a worth-while opponent for almost any lightweight. Very short-armed, he depended gretaly upon a left hook, which he rammed home every time he was able to get past Scott's long arms.

The winner flipped long lefts and rights to Fine's head as the English fighter was tearing in and at close range several times shook Davey to the heels with powerful punches to the midriff.

In a hard-fought semifinal, Johnney Dean and Young Raspi worked six rounds to a draw. As in a previous bout, when they went to a stalemate, Dean was unable to figure out a method of counteracting Raspi's straight punches with his hooks.

Reds Threaten To Suspend Derringer

Pitcher Balks at Fine for Failure to Slide, Pay to Be Withheld.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, May 4.—General Manager Larry S. MacPhail inferred late today that "unless Paul Derringer gets in there and pitches like he's supposed to" the ace twirler of the Reds' staff would be dropped from the active list.

"We've got to get rid of two men by May 15," MacPhail said, "and one of them will likely be a pitcher."

MacPhail accused Derringer, who won 22 games for the Reds last season, of insubordination. He said the "failure to slide home" incident that caused Manager Charles Dressen to slap the indefinite suspension without pay on the pitcher Sunday was but one instance of Derringer's "disregard of Dressen's orders."

Saying "the entire matter is up to Dressen," MacPhail declined to discuss the possibility that Derringer would be traded. He said he had made no efforts to effect a trade and denied that a lengthy conference he held with Manager Bill Terry before today's Giant-Red game was for the purpose of discussing a possible trade involving Deerringer.

Avoids Field.

The pitcher explained the "failure to slide" incident by saying he believed he had a better chance to score by coming in standing up than by trying to slide.

Manager Dressen, in notifying Derringer that he would go payless until further notice, asserted the failure of the big pitcher to "hit the dirt" as he lumbered home from second on a single in the fifth inning of Sunday's Reds-Giants contest cost Cincinnati a 6-5 victory in nine innings.

As it was, the Giants knocked Derringer from the box in the sixth, tied the score at 5-5 and won out in the eleventh inning.

Wake Forest Defeats Richmond Nine, by 7-1

Richmond, Va., May 4 (AP).—Forest Glass limited the University of Richmond to three hits today in pitching Wake Forest's baseball team to a 7-to-1 victory over the Spiders.

With the exception of the second frame, when he was touched for doubles by George Lacy and Bucky Jacobs for the only run scored against him, Glass was invincible. Not another hit was allowed until the eighth frame, when Ed Schaaf dropped a Texas leaguer behind second base.

Bees End St. Louis Streak, Win by 7-6

St. Louis, May 4 (AP).—The Boston Bees defeated the St. Louis Cardinals, 7 to 6, today to snap the Cardinal winning streak at six games and give Ray Benge his fourth victory of the season.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Now, we are beginning to get some place in the wrestling merry-go-round. Ali Baba, the mustachioed Turk, and Dick Shikat are to go to the mat tonight in New York's Madison Square Garden in the match that the New York commission is recognizing as a world championship affair, and the result will explain a lot that happened at Detroit ten days ago.

POVICH.

When Ali Baba came up with Shikat's title in the Detroit affair, two schools of thought immediately sprang up in wrestling circles. The one held that the Turk threw away the blueprints for the match and double-crossed the unsuspecting Shikat, who had reason to believe everything was fully understood, as it should be among gentleman wrestlers.

The other school of thought on the subject is currently pooh-pooing that theory and insisting that the Ali-Baba-Shikat affair was strictly according to the manuscript and no surprise to Shikat whatsoever. They point gleefully to the litigation in which Shikat was then involved and scent Shikat's loss of the title to the Turk as an easy way out for the German.

Shikat, you know, was hailed into the courts in Ohio by the Bowser-Curley-Dusek crowd who found themselves fresh out of world champions when Shikat flopped their man, Danno O'Mahoney, in New York last February. Recovering from their surprise, the Bowser-Curley-Dusek folks had permitted Shikat to wrestle their man O'Mahoney only with the stipulation that Shikat behave himself and upset no applecart, then attempted to enforce a contract that Shikat had signed place him under the management of one of their stooges by the name of Alvarez.

But promptly upon regaining the title from O'Mahoney, Shikat, it seems, either chose to ignore that contract or completely forgot about it. Anyway, he continued to wrestle under the management of his pal, Billy Sandow, and then it was that the Curley-Bowser-Dusek crowd got mad.

They got Shikat into the courts and the proceedings there apparently gave Shikat reason to believe that his contract with Alvarez was, indeed, enforceable. So Shikat excused himself during a court recess and meandered over to Detroit where he succeeded in losing his title to Ali Baba one evening.

If he reasoned at all, he reasoned rightly that the Curley-Bowser-Dusek crowd would not be further interested in him if he were bereft of the title that they formerly owned. Anyway, they ceased to press the case inasmuch as former world wrestling champions are a dime-a-dozen in the rassling mart and Shikat was now only a former champ.

But the match this evening between Shikat and the Turk figures to clarify the situation a great deal. If Ali Baba wins again, and he never beat anybody of any account before he beat Shikat who is a truly great wrestler, then the result in Detroit can be considered to have been very much of a surprise to the unsuspecting Shikat.

But if Shikat flops Ali Baba tonight, then that, also, will explain a lot; namely, that the Turk, who had no business in the ring with him in the first place, won Shikat's title in a bit of monkey business that relieved Shikat of the embarrassing litigation begun by the Curley-Bowser-Dusek people.

It seems, though, that all is not hotsy-totsy for the Shikat-Ali Baba management in any event. Lurking in the nearby future, by order of the New York Athletic Commission, is a match between the Shikat-Ali Baba winner and the winner of the Strangler Lewis-Everett Marshall bout which is also on tonight's program.

Should the Strangler win tonight, then it will be a fine kettle of wrestling fish. The Strangler, himself, makes the Kaiser look like a piker at the scrap-of-paper business. On the mat he is very much of an individualist without regard to party affiliations, and the attempts of any manager to do business with the Strangler are risky, to say the least. He, too, has been known to wrestle without regard to the blueprints, especially if the title is involved.

Thus, it is all very interesting. It was Lenin, I think, or maybe Stalin, who said that on-the-level wrestling matches are the opiate of the people.

No Preakness Rowdyism Is Aim

Jockeys, Trainers Will Be Warned; Derby Culprits Banned at Pimlico.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Race Track, May 4.—With two of the Nation's biggest 1936 races already marred by rowdyism, the Maryland Jockey Club is going to take special precautions to keep the forty-sixth Preakness, scheduled on May 16, from becoming an untruly run race. The humpty-dumpty start of the Derby and the dog-eat-dog finish of the Santa Anita Handicap will not be re-enacted in the Maryland classic if vigorous warnings and promise of long suspensions mean anything.

From a source close to the official family of Pimlico, it was learned today that jockeys and trainers of horses scheduled to go to the post in the Preakness will be called into conference with local officials. They will be told straight from the shoulder what is expected of both riders and horses.

Preakness Clean Race.

The Preakness generally has been a very clean race. Instances of rough riding in the classic have been few and far between. There is no reason to believe that it will not be a fairly-contested event this year, but Pimlico officials, like everybody else, are beginning to look upon the splurge of unfortunate instances in big races as habitual.

Under no circumstances will Ira Hanford, who rode Bold Venture to his Derby victory; Nick Wall, who piloted Coldstream, and Georgie Burns, up on Indian Broom, be allowed to see action in the Preakness. George Brown, jr., representing the Maryland Racing Commission, announced. These boys were suspended by Churchill Downs stewards for 15 days. The ruling grounds them beyond the date of the Preakness and Brown's statement blocks any attempt to lift the ban.

Should Bold Venture win the Maryland race, his meeting with Brevity in the Belmont might well be termed the "Battle of a Century" as far as the 3-year-old championship is concerned. Only Sir Barton, Omaha and Gallant Fox have paraded through the three stakes.

Only eight of the Derby field of 14 are eligible for the Preakness. In addition to Bold Venture, those which are possible entries are Grand Slam, Gold Seeker, Bien Joli, He Did and the Belair Stud entry of Granville, Teufel and Merry Pete. Around the latter pair is woven an angle that may serve to intensify interest in the Maryland event.

Reds Hand Giants First Shutout, 1-0

Crosley Field, Cincinnati, Ohio, May 4 (AP).—The Giants absorbed their first coat of whitewash of the season here today, 1 to 0, from the 23-year-old Lee Elbert Stine, a native Oklahoman, who won 18 games for St. Paul last year. The Giants got 8 hits off Stine, but they could not group them to do any scoring.

Carl Hubbell was the loser—it was his second straight defeat. Last Wednesday he was on the small end of a 2-to-1 17-inning decision in St. Louis. So the Giants have made him but one run in 26 innings. Today he gave up but 4 hits. The only extra-baser off Hubbell was a triple by Kiki Cuyler to open the ninth, and it spelled Hubbell's downfall.

Appleton Hit Hard; Nats Bow, 6-3

Cleveland Piled Up 6-1 Lead for Brown to Win 2d in Row.

By Shirley Povich.

Sports Editor of The Post.

Ol' Pete Appleton met up with his old pals, the Cleveland Indians, and met up, too, with his first beating of the season yesterday at Griffith Stadium. Ol' Pete used to pitch for Cleveland and there were times yesterday when it appeared he was still pitching for Cleveland. Anyway, the Indians made 13 hits off him and the Nats lost the ball game, 6 to 3.

But Ol' Pete didn't do a bad job. Four of those Cleveland runs, their winning margin, were as tainted as Alvin Karpis' reputation. There was, for instance, that incident in the seventh inning when Centerfielder Jake Powell fell down and converted Billy Sullivan's line single into a home run that scored two runners; and there was, also, that incident in the ninth inning when the ball that looked for all the world like the third out, took a freak hop over Cecil Travis' shoulder and two more Indians scored.

Brown Baffles Nats.

The Nats, too, met up with an old friend in Lloyd Brown, who pitched for the Indians, but there was nothing friendly in his pitching. Fired by the Nats as incompetent four years ago, the curve-

Dick Shikat Favorite To Beat Turk Tonight

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 4.—The mysterious Mr. Harry Ezikian—Ali Baba to you—generally recognized as the heavyweight wrestling champion, will get his chance tomorrow night t make it unanimous.

The "Terrible Turk," who came from Armenia, via the United States Navy, to bounce the title from the head of the doughty Dick Shikat in Detroit ten days ago, meets the German in a return bout in Madison Square Garden.

The New York State Athletic Commission says the winner will be the champ in its book. It declined to recognize Ali when he upset all the dope and hurled Shikat from the ring in Detroit.

Shigat Heavy Favorite.

Shikat is a top heavy favorite to flop Ali, regain his title and be matched with the winner the veteran "Strangler Sd" Lewis.

The East will be getting its first peek at Ali, a fierce-looking individual with shaved head and handle-bar moustache. While in the Navy he won light heavyweight and heavyweight wrestling championships.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 4.—Ed "Strangler" Lewis, 45 years old, bounced back into the wrestling spotlight tonight by defeating Hans Steinke of Germany.

Eastern Seeks 8th Straight Baseball Victory in Series Today

Guyon's Nine Is Opposed By Tech

Western, 7; Central, 5.

By John R. Vosburgh.

Eastern High will be seeking its eighth straight interhigh series victory today when it steps out against a powerful Tech team on the Eastern diamond. Not since midseason of 1934 have the Lincoln Parkers dropped a series combat.

Their record stands an excellent chance of being wrecked today, however, for this Tech team is the strongest since Coach Ed Foxley maneuvered the school to the interhigh title two years ago. Both Coach Foxley and Coach Guyon of the champions will trot out new pitchers this afternoon.

Wes Snow, Tech's smooth-fielding first baseman, is getting the starting assignment for the Maroon and the chief expects to use Chick Hollidge, his bespectacled basketball star. Hollidge did some pitching last season and has come along so fast this year that Guyon now calls him his "ace in the hole."

Series Pitching Poor.

At any rate, neither Snow nor Hollidge need be intimidated by the pitching performances the series has seen thus far this season. The lowest score rolled up to date in one game was 12 runs and no pitching staff has allowed less than nine hits. Both Snow and Hollidge are right-handers.

Either Elliott Bond or Ambrose J. Kendall will get Snow's job at first for Tech. Bond, a likely-looking left-hander, has been forced to miss several practice sessions recently and may not yet be in shape to start.

Both Guyon and Foxley have fair pitching reserve strength available. Dick Myers, lanky Tech right-hander, who stopped Central's rally dead in its tracks in the opening series game, has lifted his prestige no little in recent workouts.

For Eastern, Jack Carver, young Police Boys Club league star last season, has won the confidence of Coach Guyon, who declared the youngster has "plenty of promise." Carver, Jack Pembroke and Ray Stockwell comprise Eastern's relief staff ready for action. Pembroke experienced considerable difficulty against Roosevelt last week and the other twirlers will probably be given the preference.

Ring Tournament Schedule Revised

Revising original plans to extend competition over four nights, William Mulligan, chairman of the committee in charge of the impending Silver Gloves amateur boxing tourney, last night announced that preliminary bouts will be fought Thursday and the finals on Friday.

Eliminations will be held at the Merrick Boys Club gym, 611 C street northeast, with Rudy Vallee, popular orchestra leader, now appearing at a local theater, as a ringside spectator. Vallee has donated a trophy, which will be awarded the outstanding fisticuffer of the tourney. Forty budding young champions are entered.

Freddy Miller, featherweight champion, who is to defend his crown against Pete Sarron at Griffith Stadium next week, will present the Vallee trophy to its winner Friday night at the Washington Boys Club, scene of the championship round. The Junior Board of Trade and District A. A. U. trophies also will be presented at the same time.

Post Boxing Contest Will Close on May 11

All entries in The Washington Post's boxing contest must be in the hands of the contest editor not later than 5 p. m. the day of the Freddie Miller-Pete Sarron championship bout to be acceptable. File your entry—or as many entries as you desire to file—between now and May 11—and remember, all entries must be in the hands of the Boxing Contest Editor at The Post before 5 o'clock the night of the Sarron-Miller bout, upon which the contest is based.

If two or more are tied on time, the contestant scoring the fight nearest to correctly in the rounds preceding the knockout will win.

If the bout goes the distance, the contestant whose total score most nearly approximates the average score struck by the referee and two judges at the Sarron-Miller bout will be declared the winner. In case of a tie, the contestant who has the greatest number of rounds scored correctly will be declared the winner.

All ties that cannot otherwise be broken will be decided on the time of receipt of your entry. All scoring must be done according to the rules and regulations of the District Boxing Commission. The commission rule on scoring reads as follows:

Princeton Gets A.A.U. Track Championships

New York, May 4 (AP).—The forty-eighth annual junior and senior national A. A. U. track and field championships will be held in Princeton's Palmer Stadium July 3-4, one week before the final Olympic tryouts, Patrick J. Walsh, chairman of the A. A. U. track committee, announced today.

The announcement was the result of a mail vote conducted among the members of the national committee, to decide between Princeton and Milwaukee, scene of the 1934 championships. Princeton was preferred, said Walsh, because of proximity to the site for the final Olympic trials as well as the fact the United States team sails July 15 from New York.

2 Years Jr. College Sports Count as One

New York, May 4 (AP).—Two years of "junior college" competition will be equivalent to one year in "senior college" varsity competition, the National Collegiate Athletic Association has ruled in its latest move to standardize eligibility regulations.

"Beginning with the academic year 1936-37," says the latest N. C. A. A. bulletin, "competition in championship meets shall be limited to contestants who have had not more than three years of varsity competition. This action is taken with due appreciation of the fact that the junior college problem has not yet been solved, but with the idea that, in general, two years of participation in junior college would count as at least one year in a senior college.

Maryland Nine Beats Duke Team, 13-8

Blue Devils Are Toppled From Perch After Free-Hitting Tilt.

University of Maryland's baseball team topple Duke from its perch atop the Southern Conference by turning back the Blue Devils, 13 to 8, in a free-hitting game yesterday afternoon.

The visitors boasted three conference victories in as many starts before the contest. It was the Old Liners' fourth straight win and their eighth in 13 games.

Maryland collected 12 hits, including a homer by Leftfielder Bill Bryant, off the combined deliveries of three Duke hurlers. The Blue Devils reached Chad Beebe and George Wood, Maryland flingers, for 11 safeties, one of which by Second-baseman Wayne Ambler, went for the circuit.

Keller Scores Twice.

Charley Keller, the Old Liners' hard-hitting centerfielder, was the leading batsman, driving out a triple and three singles and drawing a walk in five trips to the plate. He scored two runs and drove in two more.

Maryland twice came from behind to win, and pull away from a tied score. Duke counted two runs each, in the second and third innings, but in the last half of the third the Old Liners' evened the score with a four-run rally, climaxed by Bryant's homer over the centerfield fence with two on base.

Bob Williams Greenskeeper Tournament Winner With 70

By Dave Herman.

Although the match with Philadelphia failed to materialize, the Middle Atlantic Association of Greenkeepers had their monthly get-together yesterday at Columbia Country Club, with Bob Williams, of Annapolis Roads, carrying off chief honors by virtue of his 79-7—70.

John Connelly, former greenkeeper at Army and Navy, was runner-up with 90-19—71, and Ivan Gantz, of Suburban Club, Baltimore, won third prize with 80-8—72.

Williams, playing from the extreme back tees which stretched the course to 6,473 yards, was the only golfer in the field to crack 80.

Husky Tommy Ryan, of Belle Haven, association president, had a weird 44 on the outgoing side, but rallied for a 39 coming home. Tom Fischer, of Burning Tree, scored 41-47—88.

Guest of honor at the night meeting was A. Ifold, member of a golf research division in Sydney, Australia.

It was announced that the match with Philadelphia would take place in Baltimore June 1.

George Diffenbaugh, of Indian Spring, and Bob Barnett, of Chevy Chase, defeated Ralph Beach, Suburban, and John Flattery, of Rodgers Forge, 3 and 2, in a special 36-hole match. Barnett shot 75-73 and Diffenbaugh a 73-74.

Leo Walper, Bethesda driving range professor, shot a 73, while Gene Larkin, of Woodmont, and Mel Shorey, of East Potomac, did not report scores.

C. R. Enlow scored an ace on the 168-yard fourth hole of B course at Rock Creek yesterday. He used a two iron. Bob Knight and R. D. Eagles played with him.

Lots of dirt digging will take place this afternoon at Washington Golf and Country Club's course, where the civic clubs, Rotary and Kiwanis, will clash. Ten men will play on each team. Star Rotarian golfers are V. Calvert Dickey, Tom Beavers, Dan Moorman and L. J. Goode. The Kiwanians are pinning their hopes on Pete Pardoe, Dewey Zirkin, by way of mentioning a few. Hostilities start at 1 p. m.

Among those who signed up yesterday to play in the East Potomac spring golf tournament which opens next Monday were Bill Wilhelm, Rock Creek champion; Barney Welsh, C. B. Miller, Eddie Stolar, H. J. Leach, R. O'Connor, Charlie Ficco, J. S. Beckham, E. F. Riley, D. B. Phenix, J. Hallen, Morris Gershenson and Jack Moulton. Entries close Saturday.

The executive committee of the newly organized East Potomac Golf Club, headed by T. Welby Kines, will meet tonight at 8 o'clock at The Washington Post. James H. Allen, Earl Clarey, S. G. Loeffler, Jim Sweatte, Harry Graham, Eddie Stolark and Morris Abrams compose the moccittee.

U. S. Golf Team Disappointed In Practice

By the Associated Press.

Gleneagles, Scotland, May 4 (AP).—A thoroughly chilled and disappointed group were America's Curtis Cup golfers after today's single round of practice over this bitter cold Perthshire course, where they meet the British Wednesday in defense of the cup.

None of them likes to holler wolf, but the players have lost some of the beautiful confidence with which they landed in England ten days ago. Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, captain of the team and American champion, is still wearing her lips in a straight line and she has clamped an equally rigid censorship on the other members of the team.

Nevertheless, their dissatisfaction with their play on Gleneagles' glass-fast greens and their displeasure with the weather are ill-concealed.

After this morning's round, which they all finished with chattering teeth, the entire squad caught a bus for nearby Perth to stock up on warmer clothing.

"We're going to buy some fur-lined underwear," said one member of the team.

Mrs. Vare and Doris Elaine Chambers, the rival captains, will get together tomorrow and announce their line-ups for the six twosomes and three foursomes matches, which will be played Wednesday, in contrast to the order of play in America, where the matches take two days.

In the foursomes practice in face of today's perishing wind, Mrs. Frank Goldthwaite, Fort Worth, Tex., and Marion Miley, Lexington, Ky., defeated Mrs. Maureen Orcutt Crews, Coral Gables, Fla., and Mrs. Leona Cheney Santa Monica, Calif., 1 up.

Star Porter Is Victorious in Sparrows Point Purse at Pimlico

Gelding Wins Over Field Of Six

Is Favorite, Mutuel Pays $2.70; Steeplechase to Daniel Soot.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Race Track, Baltimore, Md., May 4.—Elmer Trueman, Washington trainer, sent Star Porter into action today and the consistent gelding galloped off with The Sparrows Point Purse, the feature race of a program, witnessed by some 8,000 Monday fans. The son of The Porter, running as usual in the black, white and red of Ral Parr, Maryland sportsman, led Irish Ted, a long shot, to the imaginary wire by a half-length margin. The camera had to be brought into play to declare Zay third over Highpool.

Star Porter's ability at the 6-furlong route was not a secret and his odds were never better than 1 to 2 on the "tote" board. When the pay-off finally came, he returned a $2.70 mutuel. The gelding carried 118 pounds, most of them in the person of Jockey Moose Peters, and ran the distance in 1:14 4-5 over a slow track.

The daily double possibilities ranged up to $984.30 on combinations ending in Me Myself after Lady Beau had surprised by winning the first race. Jack Patches finally completed the twin wager and brought a $60.10 pay-off.

All in Running.

The race was an interesting one with each of the six entries figuring in the running at some stage. Highpool, Star Porter and Tutticurio looked the part of a three-horse team from the start to the turn into the stretch. Hardly a head separated them.

When Tutticurio quit and Highpool slowed slightly, Star Porter became the definite leader for the first time. Peters had swung him wide entering the stretch to keep in the better going. At this point Irish Ted and The Bailiff came through on the rail. Irish Ted blocked The Bailiff and then went on to battle it out with Star Porter. The veteran, however, had his punch left.

The first race saw the defeat of In Front, a favorite at slightly better than even money. The purse went to Lady's Beau, excellently ridden by Joe Renick. Iron Ore was second and Alit squeezed In Front out of third money. Lady's Beau was rushed into the lead in the opening furlong carried Iron Ore wide entering the stretch and then drew clear to have a daylight margin at the end. The winner paid a $20.60 dividend.

Daniel Soot, 8-year-old hunter, won the Mount Alto Steeplechase and test of 2½ miles for hunters and gentlemen riders. The veteran made every fence a winning one. He ran as if he was enjoying himself and was capably handled by C. R. White. Daniel Soot is the property of Mrs. Frank M. Gould and paid a $7.80 mutuel.

Stag II Challenges.

The Stag II, racing in the colors of Richard K. Mellon, and ridden by J. H. V. Davis, challenged sharply in the closing stages, but was two lengths off the winner. Watsonia was a distant third. The only mishap in the field of eight saw Briar Blue lose Rider D. Kerr, jr., in front of the grandstand the second time around. Kerr landed on his feet and grabbed the rein to halt his mount.

Jack Patches, long-legged son of Jean Valjean, galloped along in front of his field to win the third race at a generous $3.30 mutuel in view of his previous victory here by 12 lengths. Today he was two and a half lengths ahead of Justa Glider and running easily. Corum was third in the test over the mile and 70 yards course.

One of the hard-working assistant starters caused Wickliffe to be left at the post in the fourth race. The favorite did not break when he saw the man in front of his stall gate and trotted around the course for in the rear of the field. Infilee won by half a length over Three Daggers to pay an $11.20 mutuel. Third money went to Tuleyries Wand.

Eddie Smith, the Washington jockey, rode Little Argo, owned by Mrs. W. H. Denham, also of Washington, to victory in the fifth race. The winner paid a $33.70 mutuel and had a good margin over Jakovia. Taunton closed a gap to be third.

Donna Dulcin took the final from Hard Chase. The camera had to separate them. The winner paid $3.60.

ZINNIA	(Smith)	108	3	7	8	8	8	8	68.55

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADYS BEAU, $20.60, $9.40, $7.10; IRON ORE, $5.60, $4.50; ALIT, $4.60.

LADYS BEAU moved into a clear lead midway of the backstretch, stalled off a bold effort from IRON ORE when reaching the final turn, rallied to slight punishment when reaching the homestretch and drew clear thereafter. IRON ORE, forwardly placed in the early running, challenged boldly when leaving the backstretch, but weakened in the last furlong. ALIT improved his position on the outside, closed gamely, but could not threaten the leaders. IN FRONT was kept under strong pressure from the beginning, but failed to menace under stout urging. BLACK SCOUT was done after going three furlongs. DOLENTE was never a factor. SAUCY VIXEN and ZINNIA broke very slow with the latter running into trouble in the first sixteenth.

SECOND RACE—Two and one-half miles. Purse, $1,000. The Mount Alto Steeplechase. For hunters; allowances. For 5-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:47. Off at 2:48½. Winner, F. M. Gould's br. g. (a) by Dan IV—Scot. Trained by A. White. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 5:22 2-5 (16 jumps).

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DANIEL SOOT, $7.80, $4.30, $3.50; THE STAG II (entry), $3.70; $2.80; WATSONIA, $3.80.

DANIEL SOOT, handling his weight nicely, went into an easy lead in the first mile, was steadied to all of his fences while fencing cleanly, rallied gamely when shaken up in the last half mile and outstayed THE STAG II under strong pressure. THE STAG II followed in closest attendance of the winner after the first three fences, moved up determinedly in the last half mile and closed with good courage on the inside. WATSONIA went forwardly all during the contest, but could not threaten the leaders in the closing test. SAUGHTON BOY could not engage the leaders when put to a drive after racing in reserve early. ROYAL THOMAS made a bad landing at the ninth fence and was held safe. DRILL MASTER went every the way. SEAFARIN DAN was never a factor. BRIAR BLUE unseated his rider at the eleventh jump.

THIRD RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds. The Glen Ellen. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:17. Off at 3:20. Winner, S. S. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JACK PATCHES, $3.30, $2.70, $2.30; JUSTA GLIDER, $4.00, $2.70; CORUM, $2.70.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $60.10.

JACK PATCHES outran his field to the first turn, went along under restraint until reaching the homestretch, then was mildly shaken up during the closing furlong to hold JUSTA GLIDER safe. Latter followed closest to the winner from the beginning, made strong bids in the last half mile, but was held perfectly safe in the closing stages. CORUM, outside in the early running, worked his way up on the inside and finished gamely. STACK ARMS was under stout pressure all the way and had no mishaps. STAR SPECIAL could not reach contention at any stage. ME MYSELF was never a factor and passed tiring horses. CAMPRA broke slowly and was held safe. MISS TWINKLE was done after going six furlongs.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. The Tred Avon (first division). Start good for all but Wickliffe from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:47. Off at 3:47½. Winner, Mrs. E. I. Shrewbridge's b. m. (5), by Infinite—Dickey Lee. Trained by C. Costello. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:50, 1:16 2-5, 1:43 3-5, 1:50 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—INFILEE, $11.20, $6.60, $3.90; THREE DAGGERS, $7.60, $4.70; TULEYRIES WAND, $3.90.

INFILEE moved rounding the first turn, swung to the outside when settled on the backstretch, wore the leaders down entering the homestretch, but had to be shaken up strongly to withstand THREE DAGGERS after moving clear. THREE DAGGERS, far out of contention in the early running, saved a lot of ground when bettering his position and closed fast on the inside in the final drive. TULEYRIES WAND finished with good courage, but could not threaten the first two. JIM BROWN was made too much use of early and he tired. RELATIVITY weakened badly after going into a slight lead midway of the final turn. PRINCE PETTIE stopped early. ITALIAN HARRY was outrun. WICKLIFFE stood still when the break came. He galloped along behind his field after being sent away.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. The Holly Beach. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good for all but Feudal Lass from gates in chute. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:17. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LITTLE ARGO, $33.70, $11.40, $6.60; JAKOVIA, $9.50, $5.80; TAUNTON, $5.50.

LITTLE ARGO, in the thick of contention from the start, disposed of SHAGGY ANN when leaving the backstretch, was kept in the firmer footing after moving into the lead and outstayed JAKOVIA under a hard drive. JAKOVIA moved up stoutly in the last five-sixteenths, responded to punishment and fought it out gamely in the late stages. TAUNTON bettered his position while racing wide early, went to the inside after being straightened into the homestretch, but could not menace. IDLE FLIRT was unable to offer serious opposition when the real issue came. SOCK DOLOGER was shuffled back midway of the backstretch while in the softer footing and was never a factor. DISTRACTING, away nicely, showed no ability in the footing. BUBBLING SPRING entered contention with a rush, but flattened out badly. FEUDAL LASS propped when the break came and was away poorly. SHAGGY ANN quit to a walk.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. The Sparrows Point. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates in chute. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:46. Off at 4:50½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—STAR PORTER, $2.70, $2.60, $2.10; IRISH TED, $15.90, $5.30; ZAY, $2.90.

STAR PORTER, forced to race on the inside of his field while forcing a steady pace, gained a slight lead when reaching the homestretch, came off the rail into the firmer footing and, continuing strongly, outstayed IRISH TED. Latter, hurried along in the early racing, slipped through on the inside of the leaders when reaching the homestretch, responded to punishment and was wearing the winner down gradually at the close. ZAY, lacking speed to race forwardly, swung around her field when settled in her stride and came with a belated rush in the last three-sixteenths. HIGHPOOL showed nice speed while setting the pace, rallied willingly under punishment and held on with good courage after being overhauled. THE BAILIFF was racing gamely in the late stages. TUTTICURIO raced abreast of the leaders for five furlongs, then weakened.

SEVENTH RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:18. Off at 5:22½. Winner, H. Bruce's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLYING FEET, $17.30, $8.50, $5.80; PASS 'EM BY, $8.30, $5.50; WHITE SWEETS, $5.90.

FLYING FEET moved up strongly entering the homestretch after being outpaced in the opening three furlongs, swung to the outside when improving her position and, finishing determinedly under punishment, was up in the last strides. PASS 'EM BY, a keen factor from the start, raced MAKING TIME and WHITE SWEETS into submission and fought it out stubbornly to the end. WHITE SWEETS, going in her best form, raced into a brief lead midway of the homestretch, held on well thereafter. SPOTLESS, in tight quarters directly after the start, went wide for the entire journey. MAKING TIME was ridden hard and had no excuses. FLAMING BELLE was outrun.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. The Tred Avon (second division). Start good and fast from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:50. Off at once. Winner, Miss E. M. Hayman's b. m. (5), by Donnaconna—Dulcinea II. Trained by C. P. Miles, jr. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DONA DULCIN, $9.60, $5.80, $3.50; HARD CHASE, $5.10, $3.40; DEARZIN, $3.30.

DONA DULCIN, prominent in the early stages, was kept on the outside in the better footing, responded to intermittent punishment in the last five-sixteenth and, closing gamely, was up in the last strides. HARD CHASE was hustled into a short lead, shook off bold bids from DEARZIN in the last five-sixteenths, then held on stoutly for the closing test. DEARZIN went up strongly on the inside of the winner when reaching the final turn, saved ground, but faltered in the last quarter mile. SILENT DON could not better his position when the real test came. PLAYOFF was never dangerous. AIRWAY was held safe all the way. TIGHT WAD had no excuses.

Dear Al:

Jockey Jimmy Bryson is a happy boy now because Grand Slam made a poor showing in the Derby. Bryson had hoped that he would ride the Bomar Stable representative to victory in the Kentucky classic. However, Trainer Potts was dissatisfied with Bryson's work on the horse in two Maryland races and signed Sonny Workman for the Derby. Bryson was so disappointed at not getting the mount that when Forest Play also was named in the overnight entries, Potts obtained the services of Danny Brammer. It was a bitter pill for Bryson to swallow. He is the contract rider for the Bomar interests. When Workman came back after Grand Slam finished next to last, he told Trainer Potts that the horse "just wasn't there." Nobody seems to be able to find an excuse for Grand Slam, although mud might have helped. As a result, Bryson has been restored to good standing. He hopes to ride in his first Derby next year for the Detroit stable owned by Charles Bohn and Peter Markey. BILL.

First race—Snow Fox showed good form in Graw racing and could take down the chief money here. Kearsage hasn't run his race as yet. Could awake here to be a dangerous contender. Twice should get a slice of the money.

Second race—Reigh Stone, winner of a hunt race this year, may take the measure of Santi Quanranti in the day's steeplechase. The first named gets a nice shift in the weights and should draw a good rider as he is not seeking the apprentice allowance. Stir for the show.

Third race—Bally Bay is far down the list but would have to be taken if sufficient scratches came to put him in action. Grace Bunting gets in well and appears ready to score if the top one is out. Ado starred last year in this company.

Fourth race—Taunton and Annimessic should battle it out for the chief award here and I prefer them in the order named. Apathy figures, but may be run into the ground by the early speeders in the field.

Fifth race—Monologue has shown nothing in racing hereabouts to warrant to top selection. However, Clocker Mike is around with an angle and I'm going to string along. Malispina and Brief are the ones the figures point to.

Sixth race—The Jeffords entry of Giant Killer, Thirten Stars and Jean Bart should produce the winner of this event, a trial for Preakness candidates. Chappiphane and Conquerer have money chances.

Seventh race—Snobby Scamp, a recent winner, is still green and needs only to show slight improvement to win in this company. Flosilda, Fervid and Narise are dangerous.

Best bet—Snobby Scamp.

In the Two Preceding Quarters Extras Were 50 and 25 Cents.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 4.—Directors of General Motors Corporation today declared an extra dividend of 75 cents and the regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents on the common stock, both payable June 12 to stock of record May 14. On December 12, last, an extra of 50 cents was paid and on September 12 an extra of 25 cents was disbursed.

The regular quarterly dividend of $1.25 a share was declared on the $5 preferred, payable August 1 to stockholders of record July 6.

Indiana Standard Extra.

Chicago, May 4 (AP).—Directors of Standard Oil Co. of Indiana today declared an extra dividend of 15 cents and the regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents on the capital stock. Both are payable June 15 to stock of record May 15.

In announcing the extra dividend, President Seubert said the payment seems justified now that the first quarter results are approximately known.

Int. Nickel Raises Rate.

New York, May 4 (AP).—Directors of International Nickel Co. of Canada today declared a quarterly dividend of 30 cents a share on the common stock compared with 25 cents paid in the two preceding quarters.

Federal Costs Pass 6 Billions In Nine Months

Deficit for the Period Stood at 2.6 Billions on May 1.

By the Associated Press.

Government spending yesterday passed the $6,000,000,000 mark for the first time in the present fiscal year.

The Treasury statement as of May 1 showed total expenditures since July 1, 1935, of $6,017,524,196. As receipts during the same time amounted to only $3,361,694,814, the Government's balance sheet showed a deficit of $2,655,829,381 for the period.

A total of $5,889,142,872 was spent in the comparable period last year, while receipts amounted to $3,096,057,499, resulting in a deficit of $2,793,085,373.

The President's budget message estimated a total of $7,645,301,338 would be spent during the year. This estimate, however, preceded enactment of the bonus payment law and Supreme Court invalidation of farm processing taxes. The message at that time forecast a deficit of $3,234,000,000.

The latest estimate of the deficit on June 30, given the Senate Finance Committee by Secretary Morgenthau was $5,966,000,000.

Stocks Recover Slowly from Early Decline in Less Active Trading; Wheat Rallies.

New York, May 4.—In the slowest trading of more than a month the stock market slumped badly and then slowly recovered to finish no worse than irregular. Sales volume was around 1,000,000 shares. Some of the more popular stocks managed to gain small amounts on the day, but the rough start proved to be much of a handicap for any real advance. Where the week-end accumulation of selling orders came from no one seemed to know, but it was guessed at frightened sales orders in response to margin calls and the foreign developments. September wheat closed a cent higher at 85⅛ cents a bushel.

Sharp dclnes in prices for well-known stocks at the opening increased later the usual Monday morning dullness, which since the submission of New Deal legislation to the Supreme Court has come to be taken for granted. Instead of forcing out a heavy volume of liquidation, the opening declines merely hastened the drying-up process and business dragged during the rest of the forenoon, with a firmer tendency in prices.

French Elections.

Although toward the end of last week the market developed enough rallying power to halt the rapid fall in prices, no enthusiasm for an advance was awakened, especially in view of the supposedly small short position. When this morning's news of gains in radical power as a result of the French elections Sunday were put before the market, more stock was shaken out. It is easy to make the matter obscure of just why either the Paris or the New York market reacted as it did to the French news.

Radical legislators in France have threatened to put the state into further control over the Bank of France, which accounts for the fall in price of that stock, and naturally French Government bonds would go down with the seizing of power by political groups opposed to keeping the budget in balance and at least indifferent to some extent to protecting the franc on gold. However, all that suggests inflation in France, which ought not to have frightened the public out of common stocks.

A Low Repatriation.

Likewise on this side, if the franc should be devalued or go off gold as a result of advent of a high spending regime in France, it is not likely that any European capital now employed here should be repatriated for a long time. What ought to have been feared here, as a short-term influence on our markets, was devaluation by the conservatives, which might have meant immediate stabilization and a return to Paris of much money now invested here.

Our own political maneuvers are difficult to understand and for Americans the French situation is even more obscure. It does not necessarily follow that votes in France for so-called radicals mean that finance is going to be radical. It yet will require something more than gains by the Left in the Chamber to cut into the French investor's pocketbook. Franc devaluation continues to be anybody's guess, with the virtual assurance that nothing will be done until the country thinks it has more to gain than to lose by it.

Gold Flow.

The extensive swing to the extreme Left resulted at once in a considerable outflow of capital from Paris, and intensified the drain upon the Bank of France's gold reserves which, according to Paris reports, might amount to 1,500,000,000 francs for Saturday and today. That loss, which at par of exchange is approximately $100,000,000, no doubt would be mainly through earmarking rather than actual exports which, foreign exchange firms here were informed early today, would be relatively small.

The destination of the bulk of the capital fleeing France was London. This was evident from the fall in the franc pound cross rates, which dropped from about 75.07 francs to the pound to about 75.40 francs.

Seeking Safety.

Quite a little fleeing French capital went to Belgium also, the belga rising several points while other gold rates were falling. The sharp rise in sterling, which amounted at one time to more than 2 cents on the pound here, lifted the quotations of virtually all currencies which are directly or indirectly linked to sterling, even the Japanese yen rising several points across the 29-cent level. An interesting incident of the day was a recession of several pence an ounce in the price of gold in London, the largest sterling decline in several weeks. This brought the price of London gold to a dollar equivalent level of about $34.65 an ounce, or low enough to give a good profit on purchases in London for resale to the Treasury here.

Steel Rate Declines.

Other matters that may have had some effect, if negative, on the markets for a while were the news of Ethiopia's collapse—not unexpected—and the possibility it gave of opening wider the gates for a European race for armament and military advantage, and the failure of the Supreme Court to give its decision in the Guffey coal case.

Nickel.

Lifting of International Nickel's dividend came a little late to encourage the general market. The dividend by steady increases has now been brought back to prosperity levels, where it should be in view of the heavy orders on the company's books. General Motors dividend announcement was expected after the close of the market.

Swings.

Coca-Cola was dull before and after publication of a quarterly earning statement that showed a larger gain over a year ago than recently has been predicted. Consolidated Textile duplicated its lowest price in three years at 50 cents a share. More than 25,000 shares changed hands before a change in price was recorded. Checker Cab opened 2½ points lower, but recovered that much on the next sale. Combined sales volume in Curtiss-Wright, Textile, Central, Motors, Anaconda, Steel, Chrysler and U. S. Rubber made up 25 per cent of the total dealings of the first three hours. Motors and Steel were the most active.

Heavy Industry Biggest Gainer In 1st Quarter

One Out of Ten in Other Fields Continue to Report Losses.

New York, May 4.—The heavy industries, which suffered the most during the depression, showed the most decisive gains in the first quarter of this year compared with the 1935 quarter, according to the monthly letter of the National City Bank, which says:

"An examination of the accompanying tabulation will show that most of the industrial groups in which several representative companies have now reported enjoyed an improvement in earnings for the first quarter this year as compared with a year ago. The improvement was by no means uniform, however, for the results of many concerns ran counter to those of their respective industries. About three out of every ten individual companies had a decline in earnings instead of an increase, and one out of every ten was still in the red.

"The sharpest percentage gains in the table are found in the 'heavy industries'—which had suffered the sharpest drop in earnings during the depression—such as automobiles and petroleum, machinery, electrical equipment and railroad equipment. The United States Steel Corporation turned a deficit last year into a small profit this year, although earnings of a number of other steel companies were lower. A good showing continues to be made by the chemical, drug and office equipment industries.

"Relatively smaller gains, mixed with some declines, were reported by the industries making consumer goods, such as baking and miscellaneous food products, household goods and supplies, paper, printing and textiles, also merchandising. Some of the durable goods industries, notably building materials, are still lagging, and coal mining earnings were down.

"It is important to note that the reports for the first quarter of 1936, like those for the full year 1935, show that the percentage increase in profits was much sharper than the increase in profit margins, because of the expansion in volume of sales. This is of course a healthy sign and one of the essentials to the recovery or real prosperity, since the expansion in gross receipts means more goods produced, more materials consumed, more employment of labor and larger payrolls.

"Relatively few concerns include sales in their interim reports on earnings, but the following partial list of the more important companies whose figures have been published will illustrate the marked expansion that was made by many enterprises in the first quarter as compared with a year ago:

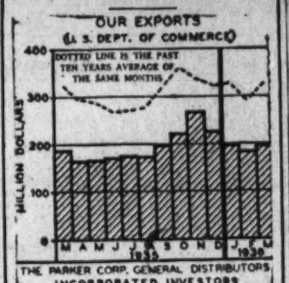
Employment Gains With Foreign Trade



Boston, Mass., May 4.—In normal times United States foreign trade is responsible for the employment of about 3,000,000 workers. The drop in foreign trade during the depression years was one large cause of unemployment. Last year exports exceeded the low of 1932 by 41 per cent, while exports in the first quarter of this year went ahead of the same 1935 months by 10 per cent.

Wheat Advances On Crop Forecasts

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 4.—Wheat prices rebounded at the last today, and scored material gains sharply in contrast with earlier downturns. Predictions in some quarters that a majority of unofficial May crop reports tomorrow would prove to be bullish were more or less responsible for the wheat market's late reversal of trend.

Wheat closed firm at the day's top point, ¼@1¼ cents higher than Saturday's finish; May, 98@98⅛; July, 87@87⅛; corn, ⅛@½ down; May, 62⅛; oats, ⅛ off to ⅛ up, and provisions varying from 5 cents setback to an equal advance.

Stock Seat $100,000, Decline of $30,000

New York, May 4 (AP).—Arrangements were made today for the sale of a seat on the New York Stock Exchange at $100,000, off $30,000 from the previous transaction on April 27 and the lowest figure for a transfer since June 21, last, when a sale was made at $99,000.

The highest price paid for a seat this year was $174,000 on February 19 and the low previous to the current sale was the transfer at $130,000 on April 27.

Business Gain Of 15% Is Seen For Half Year

Rise in Second Quarter to Be Accelerated, Survey Says.

New York, May 4.—Business activity as a whole will probably end the first half of the current year with a composite gain of some 15 per cent over the first half of 1935 if trends indicated in the monthly statistical summary of the Standard Statistics Co. follow through.

More significant from an immediate viewpoint is the fact that the increase in the second quarter will be relatively larger than that of the first three months. In contrast with a net gain of about 10 per cent in the first quarter, present indications are that the second quarter rise will approach 18 per cent. It is noteworthy that May production estimates are for an increase of 20 per cent over the same month of 1935, the largest increase for any month so far this year.

Looking ahead into the third quarter, it also appears reasonable to assume that continuing gains over industrial volumes of the same period last year will be registered. The effects of the normal summer letdown in numerous lines will be at least partially offset by heavy governmental distributions, including the bonus and heavy farm benefit payments.

While prospects for the full second half of 1936 are still obscured, and in particular it is impossible to estimate the influence of the election campaign, any letdown that is witnessed should be comparatively moderate after making allowance for seasonal trends.

Juvenile Court Hearing Is Set For Thursday

Backers to Be Heard First; Representative Norton to Reintroduce Bill.

Public hearings on the Norton Juvenile Court bill will begin at 10 a. m. Thursday in the old House Office Building, Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, announced late yesterday.

Nichols, who was appointed chairman of a special sub-committee last Wednesday after the judiciary subcommittee had surrendered the bill, said that ample opportunity will be allowed for all interested parties to be heard.

"I'm not going to rush this hearing," he said. "Everybody who cares to testify will be heard."

Proponents of the measure will be heard first, Nichols said. Several requests for time already have been made.

While there is little likelihood that the bill will be called up in the House at this session, because of the cancellation of District days, Chairman Norton, of the House District Committee, wants a report ready before adjournment.

She then plans to reintroduce the bill early in the next session and to call it up probably on the first District Day.

As the author of the measure, Mrs. Norton has accepted several restrictive amendments offered by the District Commissioners and reintroduced it.

"I think it's a better bill with the amendments," she said.

Bagdad Bombers Sent Against Rebel Tribes

Bagdad, Iraq, May 4 (AP).—Officials announce dtonight that Government planes have been sent to bomb insurgents who cut the railroad between Bagdad and Basrah.

Troops have also been sent to round up the rebel tribesmen, officials declared.

The tribes rose up in the vicinity of Rumaitha, firing shots at a locomotive and then cutting the rail line.

Authorities said the trouble had been started by propaganda agitators.

Culbertson on Bridge

Capitalizing Opportunity.

A bridge acquaintance recently poured a typical tale of woe into my weary and defenseless ears.

"Did you ever see such a lucky player as So-and-So?" (He named one of the country's outstanding experts.) "It is simply fantastic the things he gets away with! His opponents seem to get acute cases of brain fever when he becomes the declarer. They actually pour points into his lap. All he has to do is sit still and receive them!"

Having just watched the expert named play a few hands I was well prepared for rebuttal.

"Has it ever occurred to you," I asked, "that So-and-So is one of the most astute inducers and capitalizers of mistakes in the world of bridge? Let me show you a hand I just saw him play."

This was the hand. He sat South.

South, dealer.

North-South vulnerable.

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1 spade	2 hearts	3 clubs	4 hearts
5 diamonds	Pass	Pass	Double
Pass	Pass	Pass

Undoubtedly South's bidding was highly aggressive throughout, but both of his bids were predicated, largely on his freakish distribution. Moreover he knew that the opponents were not capable of perfect defensive play.

West opened the heart king. Dummy's ace won and South discarded a spade. Dummy now led a spade. East hopped up with the king and next proceeded to make a play that resulted in his own downfall; he cashed the spade ace. Obviously he should have shifted to a trump after the first spade to prevent ruffs in dummy.

But even though East helped out with this miserable defense declarer still had a thorny path to follow, and it is highly improbable that many players would have reaped full benefit from the error. East, after winning two spade tricks, followed with the ten of hearts; South ruffed and led a low spade. West split his trump honors to forced dummy's queen. A trump to the ace put declarer back into his hand, and now a difficult problem had to be solved. Declarer still had the queen and 10 of spades and East had the guarded jack. Only one trump, the jack was outstanding. If East had this vital card South's low spade could be ruffed with dummy's remaining trump, and the contract claimed. But if West had it he would overruff dummy on the spade lead.

South decided that West's void in spades strongly indicated that the trumps had not originally been divided 2-2, and proceeded to play according to that decision. He ran off every trump, which forced East to blank his club kind in order to guard the spade jack. Now the spade queen squeezed West; he could not guard both the club suit ad dummy's heart.

On The Air Today

If the Metropolitan Police Boys Club benefit fight between Sarron and Miller fails to produce a generous-sized bag of gold it won't be because radio hasn't contributed its share to the ballyhoo.

For several days Charlie Stofburg, on The Post's "Curbstone Queries" each noon (WMAL, at 12:15) has invited passersby to explain why they would like to see this particular scrap. A pair of tickets will be given the person giving the best set of reasons.

Each day this week Arch McDonald and Bill McCormick are airing workouts from the Humidor training quarters, with eye-witness accounts of the fighters' mixups with sparring partners and intimate glimpses of the business of preparing for a major encounter. Today's McDonald-McCormick description is scheduled for WJSV, at 2:30.

As a special feature, WRC presents three short bouts tonight between 40, 60 and 80 pound youngsters from one of the Boys clubs—the fisticuffs to take place right in the N. B. C. studios in the Press Club Building. The judges will be Maj. Ernest Brown, superintendent of police; John P. Meshkoff, director of the Boys Club, and Morris Fox, the referee.

The announcing for the WRC presentation will be handled by 15-year-old Robert Clark, aided by Gordon Hittenmark. Bill Coyle and Jim McGrath, of the N. B. C. announcing staff. The time: 8:30 to 9.

• • • •

Three other broadcasts in the interests of the Boys Club fund drive have been booked by WRC. Even Mary Mason, the home forum expert, will interview two youngsters Wednesday. Hittenmark will interview two boys each morning in his Timekeeper periods. And Thursday WRC at 6:45, a Boys Club harmonica band will have its inning.

• • • •

Kate Smith may have celebrated the many things she has to be joyous over at the fete in her honor at Constitution Hall last night, but so far as the air is concerned the big fifth anniversary on the air will be observed tonight, WJSV, at 6:30. Following her annual custom, she will repeat the songs included in that first C. B. S. program: "I Surrender, Dear," "Dream a Little Dream of Me," "Please Don't Talk About Me When I'm Gone," and "By the River Ste. Marie." And those numbers may be six years old, but they're all very swell to this day.

• • • •

Radio Joe: Spotlighting Junior League Horse Show night and Police Boys Club night, WJSV, at 6:30.

Willard Robison: And his Deep River Orchestra, WJSV, at 9:45.

U. S. Jury Studies Oil Industry Data

Madison, Wis., May 4 (AP).—In strict secrecy, a special Federal grand jury today began an investigation of charges that unfair trade practices were employed by some members of the oil industry.

Geographical scope of the inquiry, initiated in response to a request from Attorney General Homer Cummings was unlimited within the boundaries of the United States.

District Attorney John J. Boyle and his assistant, Harold E. Hanson, aided by four special assistant Attorney Generals, started presentation of data to the jurors. It was indicated their session would continue several weeks.

Although Federal Judge Patrick T. Stone did not specifically designate the subject of the jury's deliberations in his instructions last week, an earlier announcement from Cummings disclosed the principal purpose would be to study complaint of "independent" oil dealers that major concerns were "squeezing" them out of business.

4 Killed as Mexicans Seek to Open Church

Chihuahua City, Mexico, May 4 (AP).—Four persons were killed and four seriously wounded in a clash in Ciudad Camargo, Chihuahua, between federal soldiers and a group of Catholics who sought to reopen a church. Brig. Gen. Antonio Rios Zertuche, Chihuahua military commander, said the troops were called when the Catholics refused to disband. Soldiers fired into the crowd after the demonstration in front of the Camargo Municipal Palace, where the demonstrators demanded the keys to the locked churches. In a recent legislative amendment, the State of Chihuahua was limited to the services of one church.

Britain to Check Budget Data 'Leak'

London, May 4 (AP).—Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, told the House of Commons today the scandal of the alleged "budget leak" will be investigated by a judicial tribunal.

A high court judge and two other attorneys will preside over the investigation, Chamberlain said.

Loud cries of "Hear, hear" greeted the chancellor's announcement that the government is "anxious the matter should be probed to the bottom."

Chamberlain told the members that Lloyd's, the insurance company, had reported evidence so far collected indicated "leakage might have taken place."

The alleged leakage of information on Chamberlain's supposedly secret budget message precipitated a rush for insurance against the tea tax and income tax increases announced by the chancellor.

Camp Site Changed.

Richmond, Va., May 4 (AP).—John Q. Rhodes, jr., director of the Virginia motor vehicles division, today said the spring training camp for State policemen will be held at the Bloody Angle CCC camp near Fredericksburg instead of at Virginia Beach.
